Mortgage Matters

The Mortgage Market Mess

Today's mortgage market has certainly gone through many sweeping changes over the past few months. With over 120 lenders having shuttered their doors this year alone, the biggest question that we are asked is "how do I make sure my loan will close?"

The answer is simple: make sure that you have applied to a lender that is on solid footing and if you aren't sure, consider making application to more than one lender.

YOUR MANHATTAN MORTGAGE BROKER can often facilitate this and help provide you with approvals from more than one lender at no additional cost. If you are one of the unlucky borrowers who has been left in the lurch, the best thing you can do is to get a copy of your loan package - and get yourself to a new lender as soon as possible. If a bank is not going to fund, there is nothing to do but re-apply and do it quickly.

Some banks are making sweeping changes to their guidelines. These major changes are primarily from the large lenders that have relied upon Wall Street to fund their loans. The good news is that there are just as many banks that have made few or no changes and are lending today - the old fashioned way.

A qualified buyer will get a good mortgage.

What are some of the biggest changes that we have seen these days?

Lower loan to values - it's harder today to find 100% financing - and the larger the loan, the bigger the down payment your lender will look for. The stronger the profile, the more you can borrow.

Better credit scores to get the best rate - while there are still a few banks that are not credit-history-driven, most banks want to see credit scores of at least 700. If you are unsure of your credit score, run it.

There are ways to improve your credit if the score is low.

More liquidity - banks today are asking for larger reserves from borrowers. They want to know that you have a cushion post-closing just in case that rainy day happens.

Qualifying for the interest only loan - interest only loans are still very popular but today banks are demanding that you qualify at the fully-indexed amortizing payment - making it harder to get the interest only loan.

No Income verification loans - these are now getting harder to find. They are being offered to those who are truly self-employed and are harder to get for the salaried borrower.

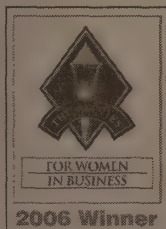

While we have seen many changes, there is still good news in the mortgage market. There are a large number of portfolio lenders in our area that are still making mortgages at very competitive rates - you can still get a JUMBO 5-Year ARM below 6.00% today - and with bond yields back at 4.50%, our traditional lenders will keep their rates low as we head into the fall season.

If the Fed cuts rates at its meeting later this month, that will also help to keep rates down and build confidence in a marketplace that has gone through a lot of change.

Going back to basics is not a bad thing - and will help to preserve the value of our Real Estate.

ART IN THE HAMPTONS....

Art Surge

Town Decision Will Lead to New Heights of Creativity in Springs

By Dan Rattiner

A wonderful new painting and sculpture renaissance is about to begin in the heart of the Abstract Expressionist Movement in East Hampton. Artists may now have toilets in their studios.

It was not so long ago that East Hampton, particularly Springs, was, along with Paris and New York, the center of creativity in the art world. Some said it was the light, a warm, soft, sometimes hazy affair which reminded artists of the rural landscape of France and Italy. Others said it was not the light, but the solitude. Whatever it was, in the period from 1945 to 1995, among those painting in the studios they built here were Willem de Kooning, Jackson Pollock, Syd Solomon, Lee Krasner, Arline Wingate and a host of others.

In 1980, however, the Town of East Hampton slammed the door on artists' studios by passing a zoning law that said no new studios would be permitted to be built. They said that the only "accessory buildings" allowed in the town were barns, garages and tool sheds. And they'd have to look like barns, garages and tool sheds. No insulation. No running water. No occupancy. The fear was that if they were allowed to be built with insulation, sinks and toilets, then soon they would be rented out to others and therefore be illegal second residences in a single residence community and that could not be allowed to happen.

It took many years after 1980 for this draconian measure to take its full effect. There were, after all, all these pre-existing art studios with bathrooms that had been grandfathered in. But as time went by, these early pioneer artists died off and their properties were comes a certain urgency to get to a bathroom fast. Reluctantly, they had to move away. The less said of this long, dark age of pinched and minor painting and sculpture (and numerous people dead in the snow trying to get to the bathroom in the main house), the better.

Finally last year, the Town Board of East Hampton, now consisting of a new generation of officials, began to rethink the situation. Many of them had begun to miss the earlier times, when they were young and were able to witness the great attention paid to Springs by the art world, which sometimes involved them personally, for example, as they might help one artist or another staggering around the streets of Springs, after a long night of drinking and arguing, to find their way home. Where had they gone wrong? Those were the good old days.

And so, in October of 2006, the Town passed a new law making it once again legal for an artist to have an artist studio, or as they described it, a detached building where those engaged in the fine arts, including (but not limited to) painting, sculpture, printmaking, ceramics and photography, could have a place.

There were restrictions of course. After all, sold off, most often not to artists, and just sort of melted into the landscape.

And so there began a long and difficult crapper-free toolshed period for artists and their studios in the Hamptons. It was a difficult time. Most of those who could tolerate such conditions consisted of the young, who could hold their water quite well, thank you, but as they grew older, they realized that with age what good is a town law without restrictions? The restrictions were that only those who could supply three letters of reference, a resume, a description of their art medium, documentation reflecting the vigor of their work and its results, such as gallery showings, sales, museum requests and so forth need apply, after which they would be reviewed by a committee and, if successful, be given a permit. There still were no toilets allowed, however. But it was allowed that a slop sink could be built so the painters could wash their brushes. Another rule was that when the artist died, the studio occupancy came to an end. They would no longer be studios. They would revert to being either garages, barns or toolsheds . again. Inspectors would see to that.

And so, the Springs began to stir.

And last week, having seen the dark clouds begin to part over that community, the Town Board took a long overdue second step — in this writer's opinion — by approving the use of crappers in art studios. Again there are restrictions. With a crapper and a sink, such facilities might now rise to the heights of a "bathroom." But cannot be a "bathroom." There can only be a "half bathroom." Not permitted still are shower stalls and tubs and mirrors and medicine chests, bath towels and so forth and so on. No sir. But even so, this is a triumph!

The law was passed on Tuesday, September 6. And already, I am told, there is a flurry of activity in not only the art world but also in the worlds of architecture, paint supply stores, building contractors and new artists arriving in town, now, almost every day. Soon there will be a thundering heap of new applications. The toilets have arrived.

The Springs, now that those in need can sit, will rise again.

* * *

On the same day that this law was passed, a third hearing on the matter of an application by Helmut Lang was held. And this will give you an idea of the power wielded by the Town Board.

Helmut Lang, the well known fashion designer, first applied for an application to build an artist studio in July of this year. His lawyer, George Biondo, whom he had hired to wade through the paperwork, filled out where it said to describe the sort of artwork he did, as "fashion designer."

On August 21, the board reviewed this application, and turned it away. It was turned away because Helmut Lang was a "fashion designer." "Fashion designer" was not listed among those things that were considered fine art. "Fashion designer" was in the town code as "business."

Now, on September 5, George Biondo appeared with Mr. Lang and said, essentially, that he had "misspoke," or, be more accurate "mis-writ." Mr. Lang was no longer a fashion designer, he said. He had sold his business about fashion design in 2005 and here were the papers. After the sale of the business, Mr. Lang founded "hlart." "Hlart" was a term he was now using to inform people of his new occupation, which was fine art. He would now be producing such things as sculpture, graphic art and mixed-media, which might be exhibited in town squares around the world. Indeed, many of Mr. Lang's works already have been accepted at various museums around the world. He produced a list of these museums.

The board unanimously approved the application. Mr. Lang can build a studio, and this time, lucky him because of the delay, with a crapper.

What If Instead of Real Estate, the Price of Cats had Skyrocketed?

By Dan Rattiner

What would have happened if years ago, instead of the cost of real estate going through the roof, the cost of cats went through the roof? What would articles look like in Dan's Papers?

I would like to invite readers to join me on this very merry journey. Here's a bunch I have thought up. If you can think of a few of your own to add, send them to my blog, Dan's Blog at www.danshamptons.com. The Southampton Town approved a 2% transfer tax yesterday on all cat sales that are in excess of $200,000. The money is earmarked to create preserves for dogs.

"Dogs have been an important part of the Hamptons landscape for hundreds of years," the Town Supervisor said. "Now they are vanishing. What could be more Hamptons than a black lab running happily down to the ocean to have a swim? We will be using the money to create special pastureland in the town where dogs can be free to graze unmolested. We will have vets and dogwalkers. There will also be places where dogs can be taken on leashes, of course, down paths to frolic in the ocean."

And they won't even let her out alone for fear of the catnappers."

LABOR CRISIS IN THE HAMPTONS

Statistics show that more and more local people are selling their cats, usually at a huge profit, and then moving away. And more and more there is a labor crisis here. As a result, our Senators and Congressmen have proposed a law that would allow foreigners from certain countries where cats are abused to come to the Hamptons and seek work on what they call a Cat Permit. Currently, 90-day permits have been put into place for college students from Slovakia, India, Costa Rica and Nebraska. We expect to get through the summer.

Schools in Springs and Bridgehampton Consider an Arrangement

By Dan Rattiner

One of the stranger stories to surface this September is about the flirtation that is taking place between the Bridgehampton and Springs schools. Any kid going to either of these schools must be shaking their heads in amazement about what's going on.

Before I go on with any of this, I should say that I am a resident of the Springs School District and what might or might not happen will affect my family and me. That said, here's the story.

Three weeks ago, officials from the Springs School, which is a K-8 school, requested a meeting and then held a meeting with Bridgehampton School officials to discuss the idea of allowing graduates of the Springs School to attend high school at Bridgehampton. Bridgehampton is a K-12 school, is nine miles away, in another town and in terms of culture, might be on another planet.

The meeting went very well. According to one Bridgehampton official, if Bridgehampton would have accepted the proposal, it appeared that the Springs people would have signed on the dotted line right then and there. In any case, Bridgehampton warmly received Springs, there was talk about how they might mesh and how they might not mesh and Bridgehampton said they would think about it.

Here is how these two schools differ. Springs is kids on bikes, about 60% white and 40% Latino. Only 1% are African-American. It is also overflowing with energy, has about 580 kids, a staff of about 50 and student test scores that usually finish in the middle of the pack when New York State does its annual testing of first and fourth graders in math and English. It is a classic white bread school going through the not unusual 40% African-American. But in the 1970s, the whites en masse fled the school and enrolled their kids in private schools that soon flourished just out of town. Bridgehampton now was 90% African-American, and after that, white Bridgehampton residents made an attempt to shut down the Bridgehampton School because, with only half the students but the same number of teachers and administrators — all had tenure — the cost of the school was very high.

Mercifully, this attempt failed. And the result has been perhaps the best-offered education imaginable. There are so many teachers per student that it is almost like a private tutorial. As for the test results, how about the top of the heap? Bridgehampton gets 100% when the state comes in.

After the Springs-Bridgehampton get together, the Bridgehampton School officials held their own meeting about what had just transpired.

One person said that if Springs wanted to send their kids to high school at Bridgehampton School, there wouldn't be enough room. Bridgehampton should have the option to send their younger kids to Springs.

Another person said that if Springs sent their kids to high school in Bridgehampton, the test scores would plummet. To which the superin-

Latino transformation.

Bridgehampton, from K-12, has only 161 kids. A high percentage of them, perhaps 50%, are African American, because there is a large enclave of that ethnic group on the Sag Harbor Turnpike. And they are getting an excellent education.

The reason for this is because of white flight. Years ago, the school was about 60% white and tendent of the Bridgehampton School, an African American woman named Dr. Youngblood, commented, "I don't like what I am hearing."

This meeting and the one before it were caused by three different factors, all of which end with the word money. One is that people tend to talk one way in general, but a totally different way when it comes to their own kids. Two is that the Springs School is caught between a rock and a hard place, which I will explain in a minute. And three is that the rules and regulations in the state, county, towns and school districts, regarding who pays what to educate our kids, are unbelievably screwed up.

If the Bridgehampton School is an excellent school because of white flight (serves them right), the Springs School District is another matter. I moved into this district years ago because I wanted to raise my young children in a community with lots of other kids and lots of little league and lots of school activities. I also wanted to be close to my parents who lived in Montauk. So I looked into East Hampton.

In East Hampton, there is only one place you could go to live that would fill that bill. The other school districts in the town are quieter with fewer kids. Springs was where it was at. And it was filled with rich folks, artists, locals, fishermen, merchants and blue-collar people. In other words, lots of everybody. What could be better?

The Federal Government has a law that says no matter what, no matter if a person is a homeowner or a renter, a member of the DAR or an illegal alien, they have to send their kids to school and the schools have to take them in.

Then they said that the dotted lines which defined the extremities of the districts surrounding the particular schools had to pay the taxes required for however many of them were enrolled in that school.

As it has turned out, running a school is the leading cost on your real estate taxes. And if your district is teeming with kids, then the taxes are high. If your district has very few kids, then your taxes are low. The taxes in Springs are far and away the highest in East Hampton Town. They are four times as high, for example, when compared to the taxes paid in Amagansett, a district of about the same acreage and population, but with only one quarter the kids. And they are only higher because of what one has to pay for the schools.

If the Federal Government requires that every kid go to school, why doesn't the Federal or State Government have a mechanism to feed money into a district that has a lot of kids? They don't. And it beats me.

The Springs kids, up until this year and since the school was founded 150 years ago, have graduated their kids into East Hampton High School. Springs is in East Hampton. It's five minutes away. In Springs you're raised to be a Bonacker in the same way that in Tuckahoe you're raised to be a Mariner. The East Hampton High School Bonacker-Southampton High School Mariner rivalry has been contested on the football field every autumn for years and years.

As for Bridgehampton, it is too small to field a football team. It stands alone. But Bridgehampton is part of Southampton.

In any case, every year when elementary school graduations take place, the school officials meet to determine how much money a high school has to charge each school per kid to go there. There is no East Hampton High School District after all. The cost has to be divided up. Seems fair enough. Last year, the charge per kid was about $15,000 — up a few percentage points from the year before. Springs, which has the most kids, had to budget the biggest amount, and they did. But this year, the charge per kid has been set at $24,000 per kid. It's a half again increase. And Springs cannot afford it.

"Local people with kids can't afford to live here if this happens," one Springs School parent said. "They will flee the Springs."

Which, if you think about it, will mean that school taxes in Springs will go down, although that would be years and years away. Meanwhile, they had to think of right now.

And then somebody got the bright idea to go shopping for other high schools. And Bridgehampton came up. Bridgehampton has just announced that they will charge $15,000 for

A Member of Our Family Lost and Found on Three Mile Harbor Rd.

By Dan Rattiner

I think it's fair to say that the Publishers and Editors of the various newspapers here in the Hamptons maintain a tightlipped politeness with one another. We compete for advertising and news scoops. We compete for readership and store shelf space. But we all know never to attack one another because with the fire-power that comes with freedom of the press, if one of us ever attacked another, the attack would only come back. And that might just benefit a third.

Thus, if it ever happened that a Publisher shot his wife in the kitchen, the headline in all the competitors' newspapers would read GUNSHOTS FIRED HERE. There's a certain comfort in that. It's one of the perks of being a Publisher.

Thus it is that, in this context, I was so surprised to see, on page D5 of the August 30 issue of the East Hampton Star, a picture of a member of my family being held up off the ground and forced to face the camera, appearing three columns wide and six inches high, with the caption that this creature had been lost somewhere, but was now found. And all we had to do now was claim him.

And I'd like to thank the Star for that. Thus, were we reunited with our twenty pound, dinner plate-sized red-legged South American tortoise who had been lost and away from home for the past two and a half weeks.

Oh, is this such a small town story.

It began eighteen years ago, when an environmentalist named Andy Sabin took a six-year-old boy named Ben on a nature walk in Amagansett to find salamanders, snakes and other reptiles. At the end of the walk, Andy gave the boy a three-inch turtle that had been bred in captivity in Florida, hoping to foster History Museum on the Sag Harbor Turnpike in Bridgehampton. He also knows all about lizards, salamanders, snakes, alligators and other reptiles. He knows much about all the other creatures on the planet. And he did explain — I wasn't there at the time — the maintenance factors involving this particular turtle. He was a vegetarian. He ate leaves and vegetables. He would grow big. He would live to be, perhaps, a hundred years old. He would need a bath every morning. He would do one poop a day, usually in the bath. So there you are. Good luck.

Thus began Chris' stewardship. Every parent knows what this is.

Five years ago, I met Chris and came to know and love the menagerie of creatures that she lives with, which included, what was by this time, a full-grown beast living in Chris' Manhattan apartment. He was about the size of a portable television set that slowly crept silently across the floor in an innocent, but nevertheless very intimidating fashion.

Later, back in East Hampton, I introduced Dribble — named after the turtle in Judy Bloom's children's book Superfudge — to my two dogs. They all sniffed each other and expressed mutual interest for a while. Then his continuing interest in naturalism.

"This is for your son Ben," Andy said, addressing Ben's mother Christine. "I want you to care for this turtle for him until he grows up and can take care of it himself."

Andy had recently returned from the Amazon, stopping in Florida to pick up this turtle and some others. He is the philanthropist who founded the new South Fork Natural they went their separate ways. There was no further contact.

"He doesn't bite," Chris said. "He eats leaves."

I tried putting my finger close to his beak to see. I trust Chris. Then I thought better of it.

As time went by, I did notice that Dribble, in the fullness of his adulthood, was the sort of fellow who minded his own business, never got angry, seemed to have no particular place he wanted to go, but was happy about that. I sometimes looked at him and wondered — what are you thinking? Not much, he would reply. He would stick his head out when he was curious to see something. He would stick his head in when he was scared of something, such as a strange dog in the house. But he loved children, although only in a way that a full-grown Amazonian reptile might. It was hard to say.

We have a sunken dining room, which means that there are two steps up from the heated brick floor to any of the other rooms that lead off it. In other words, during the winter, Dribble was king of the dining room.

In the summertime, Dribble enjoyed the Hamptons out of doors, as everybody else did, but in his own private grass pasture ten feet by thirty feet with numerous bushes to lurk under, a pasture bounded on three sides by wooden fences and on the fourth by a deck dressed underneath with latticework, which we had come to believe was turtle impenetrable. How wrong we were.

Two and a half weeks ago, Dribble vanished. We went out there and he wasn't there. We called, here Dribble, here Dribble, and there was no answer. Chris said he would come back. I wasn't so sure. Chris said we should call the police and the animal control unit, and I did. Chris said we should put up signs around at Damark's Deli, and we did that. Chris expressed periods of sadness. And she thought she had found where Dribble had made his exit, in what was a small break in the latticework.

"He must have gotten under the deck and from there gotten through the latticework on the other side by the driveway. He couldn't have gone far."

We looked in the driveway. We went up and down Three Mile Harbor Road looking for him. We waited. I called East Hampton Fence to have them come fix the break. After a week, I thought he could have indeed gotten very far.

Which way could he have gone? Into the harbor and swum away? It was Chris' belief he would sink like a stone. Up the street toward East Hampton Point? Down the street and into downtown? Could he have got run over? At least he would not go hungry, I thought at one point. All he had to do was put his head down and eat grass. But I felt sad anyway, not because Dribble and I were pals or anything, but because he mattered so much to Chris.

"How do I tell this to Ben?" she said at one point. Ben, by this time, was long gone from the nest and was now working as an Editor for the New Republic Magazine in Washington, DC. I tried to help Chris grieve.

"Dribble is on the road," I told her. "He will be fine. He lives in his shell. It's like his motor home. He lives to be a hundred. He's having a fine time."

It didn't help much.

On the afternoon of August 30, I got a phone call from Andy Sabin himself.

"Have you seen the Star?" he asked. I had seen the Star, but apparently I had missed the lug's big puss on page D5.

"Is Dribble all right? There is this tortoise that looks just like Dribble that somebody found. Is Dribble okay?"

"No," I said. "He's been away. We can't find him."

"Well look at page D5. I think it's him! Why don't you tell me these things?"

The finders of the tortoise, the caption said, were Tom and Charlie Miller of Oak Dale Farms on Three Mile Harbor Road next to the Round Swamp Farm where Chris shops every weekend. I called the farm. This is just one mile toward downtown from our house on Three Mile Harbor Road.

Here's what Tom had to say.

"I was with my eight-year-old son Charlie cleaning old paneling out of the late Cliff Townsend's house next door to, I guess, your house, when I just went out the back door carrying stuff and tripped over what I thought was a big rock. I had never seen anything like this guy before."

Tom, who knows his animals — there are horses, roosters, pigs, chickens, goats and even sometimes yaks on his 12-acre farm down the road — knew right away that this tortoise was not from around here.

"I called Larry Penny, our knowledgeable town environmentalist, and he told me it had to be a box turtle. I told him this is no box turtle. It's got red legs. He said maybe it's a

From Moriches to Montauk, Filmmakers are Recording Windsurfers, Tourists

By David Lion Rattiner

The Hamptons International Film Festival is right around the corner and with it comes a new batch of local movies that have been made or are in the process of being made right here in the Hamptons. One of the most interesting movies is Randall Krongard's film, "Override," most notably because he is shooting the entire film on a low budget and is playing the part of writer, star and producer. Mr. Krongard wrote the script about a year ago, depicting the story of an everyday guy who gets involved in street fighting as a way to make money after his life goes down the tubes when his daughter is killed in a terrorist attack. Sounds like the plot of a real Hollywood movie.

Mr. Krongard has been doing everything for the film from scouting locations to applying makeup on the cast, who he sometimes finds just by walking into a local business in East Hampton and asking if anyone wants to be in a movie.

The director of the film is a man named Robert Frank, who works at Reed's Photo Shop and also is the Production Director for LTV in Wainscott. After the two of them got together, they headed to New York City for casting where they met a Los Angeles-based actor named Samrat Chakrobarti, who has a resume that includes roles on "Law and Order" and

"The Sopranos."

Another movie, which was screened in Southampton just two weeks ago, is about windsurfing. The film, by John Decesare and Jace Panebianco, is appropriately called "The Windsurfing Movie." Panebianco is a Southampton local who has windsurfed across the Atlantic Ocean solo. He is one of only twelve people in the world that have accomplished this feat. The 31-year-old windsurfer graduated from Southampton High School in 1994 and is in excellent physical condition. His movie is a true documentary of the sport and has gained national and international atten-

TOWNS LOOK TO SAVE THEIR SCENIC VISTAS

By T.J. Clemente

Many years ago, large tracts of land were set aside by the Federal, State and Town governments as parks and marshland. The idea was to preserve some of the most beautiful locations for the future appreciation of generations to come. That concept has now been expanded to preserve not only the lands, but also the view of and from those areas. The serenity of these sacred views is important for the peace and tranquility they provide the residents and visitors here. After identifying and taking inventory of significant scenic areas, these governing bodies devised a comprehensive plan to preserve and protect these areas from the scourges time and development can create.

The Town of East Hampton is rich with scenic views. Many who were born and raised in the town or have lived there for a long time take for granted the amazing power of the scenic, undeveloped areas. In order to preserve these vistas, the New York State Division of Coastal Resources is holding meetings as part of an eight-year effort to create feasible strategies to preserve and protect nine specific areas in the state. The results encompass a total of no less than 20,000 acres of East Hampton, including land around Accabonic, land within East Hampton Village, Gardiner's Island, Montauk Point, Hither Hills, land around Napeague, the Lake Montauk region and the shores of Northwest and Three Mile Harbors.

The report actually names Montauk Point Lighthouse as one of the most recognized landmarks in the state. Interestingly, of the top fifty sites included in the report, only eleven house structures are named. Copies of the August 8 report are now available on the Town of East Hampton's website and at the East Hampton Public Library. The report is meant to act as a roadmap, detailing how to maintain and improve

WESTERN box turtle. Just set it free. I told him it had to be somebody's pet turtle. It was huge. This was not from around here."

Tom put Dribble — who he had decided to call Mr. Big — into the back of his truck and took him down the street. He set up a portable outdoor enclosure for him, and he waited.

"I figured somebody would be looking for him. I looked around for signs. I didn't see any. How far could he have got?"

One of his friends told him he had seen Mr. Big the day before, down by the little park by the boat slips that are across the street from the Townsends'. If true, it was amazing he hadn't been hit by a car. Tom called the East Hampton Star and asked them to come over and send a photographer.

"He's a really friendly guy," Miller told me, referring to Mr. Big.

I asked him about that.

"When you come near him, he doesn't hiss. And he comes right over to you."

Miller had begun to look for a proper home for Mr. Big if nobody claimed him. Perhaps a game farm.

The Star sent reporter Carissa Katz to take the picture. Carissa was one of my daughter Maya's best friends. They went to the Springs School and East Hampton High together. I have known Carissa since she was nine years old. Tom told me Carissa said she lived almost across the street from the farm growing up, and I told Tom that was true. Carissa stayed. Maya went to San Francisco.

So now Dribble is back in his pasture and the break in the latticework has been fixed, and he appears to be sort of strutting around down there. I think he is very proud of himself. That's what Chris tells me, anyway. He's eating well.

Dribble has used up just one of his reputed ninety-nine Amazonian lives here. It's ninety-eight to go. Go Dribble.

And again, thank you East Hampton Star.

tion. The movie went from a simple idea to costing $250,000, since it started snowballing from day one. It is a modern day classic version of the movie Endless Summer, only instead of following surfers, it follows the lives of windsurfers. Some of the scenes that it features are amazing. One such scene is with Panebianco heading out with a good friend, who is a quadriplegic. This touching scene really captures the human spirit, which has made this movie attractive not just to windsurfers, but to anybody. This has gotten Panebianco really excited about the film. He can't believe how much attention his Windsurfing vision has attracted.

Another movie being made in the Hampton is a major motion picture about the rumors of supernatural activity that went on years ago at Camp Hero in Montauk. Written and produced by John Brodie and directed by Christopher Garetano, the film is called Montauk: Unveiled. The movie is being made by Fortune Teller Films and is a "docudrama" about The Montauk Project, also known as the Phoenix Project, which took place in Montauk between 1970 and 1983. The many rumors about this time period include stories about time travel, mind control, genetic manipulation, inter-dimensional travel, space travel, memory erasure and creation, genetic experiments and just about anything relating to Science Fiction. What dramatically sets this movie apart is that, besides going out to Montauk and shooting the film on site, they also dug up information about who was actually there. The interviews they conducted for the film are captivating because they are from people who were actually working there at that time. Garetano argues, "What incentive do they have to lie about this?" And it is that argument which gets under your skin. The film is set to be released in theaters in early 2008.

With all of this movie hype throughout the Hamptons, it is easy to think that we may be going Hollywood. All we need are a couple of major movie studios to open up shop and we'll be in business. Are the Hamptons moving in that direction? Are we already there? It seems that with all of the celebrities out here and the movies that are being made, we are getting pretty close.

Sag Harbor Celebrates

300 Years of Whaling, War, Trade & the Underground Railroad

By T.J. Clemente

When Southampton and East Hampton were founded, Sag Harbor was still an Indian Village named Wegwagock. The Town of Southampton has a document recording its purchase of Wegwagock from the Indians in 1664, which often refers to the area as the Harbor at Sagg. The first official mention of Sag Harbor as an entity was in a 1707 document. Therefore, the accepted date of the founding of Sag Harbor is 1707, making 2007 Sag Harbor's 300th anniversary. This weekend, there are many splendid events planned around the Village's annual Harborfest, including the 300 Stories of Sag Harbor play, which will be presented on Friday, September 14 at 8 p.m., Saturday, September 15 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, September 16 at 4 p.m. at the Old Whalers' Church on Union Street.

The whaling tradition of Sag Harbor dates back to the first three families in Sag Harbor — James Howell, James Foster and Nathaniel Fordham, who were granted the right to build the first whaling dock on the wharf in Sag Harbor. The second whaling dock would not be built until 1770. James Howell and Nathaniel Fordham, Jr. were granted the first legal permission to construct the first "Try House" in which to process whale oil right in the harbor, in 1761. From there, the town grew and by the early 1800s, the three homes existing in 1710 were surrounded by more than 100 buildings in the town. By 1800, there were four working windmills in operation in Sag Harbor.

Sag Harbor was bombarded by the British Fleet in the War of 1812, after being occupied by the British during the American Revolution. Huge fires destroyed the town three times in the 1800s, but whaling money brought the town back to life quickly. In 1800, Sag Harbor had nine slaves, who were brought in to perform the tedious tasks of boiling blubber. By the 1840s many freed slaves were employed in the whaling trade

TO TELEPHONE POLE OR NOT TO TELEPHONE POLE

By Renée R. Donlon

When it comes to poles, size matters to residents of the East End. And so, when the Long Island Power Association (LIPA) recently announced its proposal to increase both the size and number of power line poles throughout the South Fork, the public began to mutter and mumble and write in disapproval. The number of new poles, the size, height and material of poles and the ratio of overhead versus underground lines all vary with four options included in the proposal. Public opinion, however, does not vary as much. Most Hamptonites seem to favor options that do not include overhead lines. The reason for this? Surprisingly, it appears that most people do not live or visit the Hamptons for its expansive views of power lines. They seem to come instead for the unmarred views of long stretches of beach, sea and fields, all of which look better without black lines running through them or steel poles sticking into them.

Yet the recent LIPA proposal sees some aesthetic loss as an unavoidable byproduct of its need to strengthen the grid. An August 21 online document bearing the catchy title "Bridgehampton-Southampton Transmission Line Proposed Routing Options" spoke of "major East End thermal equipment overloads [and] voltage collapse." The power grid is overloaded as it is and LIPA is worried that the disparity between supply and demand will only widen as the load growth increases. A graph titled "South Fork Load" predicts the load reaching 400MW by 2025 or 450MW in the case of "extreme weather." LIPA claims that as the load continues to grow, certain system conditions, if left unattended, will raise the risk of "cascading system failures" for both the North and South Forks.

More immediate concerns are also at hand. A

and these citations set the groundwork for Sag Harbor's reputation as a stopping place for the "underground railroad," which was pioneered there by the worshipers of St. David AME Zion Church. The voices and spirits of those who hid, toiled and suffered will forever be remembered by the Village's residents.

In November of 1861, John Wallace Burke, a Sag Harbor resident, put together a group of 23 East Enders to fight in the Civil War. They left the town on Nov. 20, 1861 to join the Union forces. He actually witnessed the historic battle between the first two iron-clad warships, the Monitor and the Merrimack.

In keeping with Sag Harbor's celebration of its 300th anniversary, Stephen Longmire's new book, Keeping Time in Sag Harbor, recently hit the bookstores. This masterpiece brings the reader through 300 years of Sag Harbor's history, with dazzling portraits of the Village's existing historical sites juxtaposed with historical photos of Sag Harbor in the past. Also included are journals and other literary writings of Sag Harbor residents living through the vivid history the photos portray. This book is now available at local bookshops and in the Sag Harbor, East Hampton, Southampton and Bridgehampton public libraries.

Another noted event celebrating both Harborfest and Sag Harbor's 300th Anniversary is The Secret Whale Young Artist Exhibit, to be held at the Whaler's Museum in Sag Harbor on Saturday, September 15 and Sunday, September 16. With young artists from all walks of life exhibiting paintings, sculpture, jewelry, photography, prints, performance art and fabric design and many other amazing ways to express one's self, it is a must see. There will also be live performances on Saturday night by bands like Too Busy Being Bored, The Valentino and Gabriella Crespi.

Being Sag Harbor has experienced a myriad of events, from the sounds of British troops marching and cannons blasting to huge fires, the hiding of slaves, the Patriotic fever of the Civil War, the demise of the whale trade, the immigration of watchmakers from eastern Europe and two World Wars. On a Saturday morning, there is still nothing more charming than strolling down Main Street to the historical wharf to view the famous harbor, 300-years old and still going strong. Congratulations!

each out-of-district kid who goes there. And they are not raising that price.

I blame our New York State Legislators for this problem happening at this time. Help needs to be provided for parents in Springs to have their kids go to East Hampton High, to play for and root for the Bonackers. It is not forthcoming. And I am sure this problem, where you have a concentration of kids in one district, is not unique. It has been a Statewide problem.

It seems, however, that cries for help fall on deaf ears. Perhaps all our well-heeled State legislators live in posh school districts and don't see the problem. It's okay for them and their kids. And that's all that matters. Right?

It is true there are many more aspects to this problem, including multiple family residents and illegal immigrants and wealthy summer people who send their kids to private schools in Manhattan and don't want their taxes to go up on their vacation home, but I think this is the essence of it.

I still remember a very rich man who owned a big house in Springs standing up at a school meeting I attended to consider a school budget increase and saying he and his wife are in Palm Beach all winter, have their kids in private schools and won't vote for anything that raises his taxes here.

In any case, if you see a very confused-looking Springs kid out on the basketball court next year wearing a yellow and black Bridgehampton Killer Bee uniform and playing for the state championship against a tiny upstate school called Kaboodle with 71 students — it's only fair that little schools play little schools so big kids don't hurt little kids — now you'll understand.

Anybody want to buy my house?

Clean Mouth Better Health - The Perils of Periodontal Disease

- Periodontal disease attacks the gums and the bone supporting the teeth in the jawbones, thereby leading to loss of teeth. To eliminate gum inflammation, treatment consisting of scaling, root planing and curettage - which is essentially cleaning the teeth well - is required.
- If periodontal pockets persist, periodontal surgery may be indicated. Receding gums are another frequently overlooked problem that requires treatment; periodontal surgery can be performed to improve appearance when there is an abundance of gum tissue.
- Numerous studies have linked periodontal disease with heart disease, diabetes, low birth weight babies, pancreatic cancer, obesity and osteoporosis. Periodontal disease can be a chronic condition which requires ongoing care. Professional periodontal treatment is an investment in the health of your mouth and your overall well-being.

INTRODUCING PIEZOSURGERY® PRECISION DENTISTRY TO LONG ISLAND

Improve your life with Dental Implants

BY DR. HOWARD POPPER & DR. JASON POPPER

Piezosurgery® is the new dimension in bone surgery. This revolutionary technique for Periodontal surgery and Implant Dentistry provides trauma free, precise and safe treatment.

Chances are, whether you have lost one tooth or several, whether it is a new situation or something you have lived with for years, you have never become fully accustomed to losing such a vital part of yourself.

Now you can have replacement teeth that look, feel and function like natural teeth. Advances in dental science allow your dentist to offer artificial tooth roots which fuse with the jawbone to form a secure foundation for tooth replacement.

What happens when you lose a tooth?

If you are missing one tooth or more, you may find there are other things you miss. You may miss your natural smile. And when was the last time you crunched into an apple or sank your teeth into a mouth-watering steak? Maybe you feel self-conscious about eating or speaking in public. Perhaps your remaining teeth are shifting, or you suffer from muscle strain or headaches. Do you miss the comfort you once experienced in familiar situations at work, home, or with friends?

Naturally, the effects of tooth loss vary from person to person and depend on what has been lost. If you have lost a crown, you have lost the visible part of your tooth. If you have lost the root as well, you have lost the unseen part of your tooth and indeed the most important part. The root anchors the tooth to your jawbone providing support for the crown. Without the root, the bone around the missing tooth will gradually recede, remaining teeth will shift, and chewing will become more difficult with time.

For those who have lost all of their teeth in an upper or lower jaw, the long term problems are even greater. Because bone shrinks after tooth loss, nerves become exposed and dentures lack support. Loose fitting dentures compound problems and lead to sore gum tissue and additional pain.

Traditional periodontal and implant therapy available with intravenous sedation, administered by certified anesthesiologists.

Missing Plane

It's Believed Down Between Westhampton and East Moriches

By Daniel Simone

The morning of August 25, a warm, windless day, Kennworth Eaton, a 76-year-old pilot from Hampton Bays, drove to Spadaro Airport in East Moriches, parked his car and walked on to where he had last anchored his private aircraft.

At 11:45 a.m., Mr. Eaton conducted a brief, routine inspection of his aircraft. He examined the Piper Cherokee PA-32's wing ailerons, tail elevators and rudder. The pilot checked the landing gear struts for any hydraulic fluid leaks. All routine. Satisfied, he then got into the cockpit, performed the tasks on his pre-flight checklist and latched into his safety harness.

Ready for takeoff, Mr. Eaton primed the engine, turned the three-way ignition switch to the far right and, after two or three jerky revolutions of the propeller, the private plane blared into a healthy roar, belched a hazy puff of smoke and settled into a comfortable, whirring idle. While the engine idled, the veteran pilot most likely scanned the various gauges on the dashboard that monitor the plane's vital signs and set his compass. When the engine's operating temperature had stabilized within the optimum range, he must have gazed at the lubrication gauge to insure that oil pressure was adequate.

Mr. Eaton was finally ready to taxi toward the 2,200-foot-long runway. He adjusted the propeller and gently pulled on the throttle until the engine reached 2,800 RPMs. The airplane rolled forward until it arrived at the apron of the airstrip. Ready for flight, the pilot applied full throttle, the prop emitted a belligerent roar and in less than 20 seconds, the Piper was airborne, flying into the glaring sun. At an altitude of about 500 feet, it banked to its port side and turned toward Gabreski Airport.

HAMPTON TRADITION IV — STUART'S SEAFOOD

By T.J. Clemente

One of the benefits of living in the Hamptons is our access to seafood harvested from the surrounding waters. For over 52 years, Stuart's Seafood Market has been offering the catch of the day to both local residents and local establishments. Charlotte Klein Sasso, along with husband Bruce Sasso, has been operating the family oriented Stuart's for the last 12 years. She smiled when she said, "When you buy the catch of the day it is the catch of the day. The baymen bring their fresh catch here before it is shipped to the Fulton Fish Market in New York City. We get first pick." And that is how Stuart's was established back in 1955.

Stuart Vorphal Sr. and his sons Billy and Stuart Jr. built a packing station in Amagansett to ship the freshly caught fish to the city. When locals began following the trucks to the packing-house, they started a retail business. The rest is Hamptons history and now a tradition. Located at 41 Oak Lane (the first left turn after the light on Route 27 at Abrahams Path heading west), Stuart's is not easily seen or found by the average weekend visitor. But once you drive down the long driveway by the sign that reads "open seven days a week all year round" you walk into quite an operation. As Charlotte pointed out, "We have the capacity to hold 10,000 lbs. of lobsters alone." With fresh supplies of halibut, striped bass, bluefish, tuna, swordfish, flounder, fluke, squid, blowfish, wheatfish, blackfish, scallops, shrimp and, of course, the big lobster tank, Stuart's goes beyond offering fresh local produce, homemade chowders, Gazpacho and smoked fish paté. There is also a nice supply of little neck clams, soft shell clams, chowder clams and cherry stone clams, as well as mussels and oysters. The saying, according to the Sasso family, is "One stop at Stuart's makes every dinner special!" The Ginger Key Lime Marinade is legendary. In fact, the seafood

Missing (continued from previous page)

Page, a friend of Mr. Eaton, who has been missing since August 25. An expert on single-engine propeller aircraft, Mr. Page took great pleasure in watching Mr. Eaton perform his perfunctory pre-flight inspections and his typically flawless takeoffs.

According to Mr. Page, Kennworth Eaton had set course for Francis S. Gabreski Airport in Westhampton, a mere eight miles due east of the Spadaro Airstrip. Although the flight should have taken less than five minutes, Mr. Eaton radioed the Gabreski control tower at approximately 1:45 p.m. — two hours after having departed from Spadaro — and requested ILS (Instrument Landing System) assistance. Since takeoff, the warm August weather had enshrouded the Westhampton region and surrounding area with a dense, impenetrable fog, hence Mr. Eaton's ILS request.

An ILS landing allows the control tower to track an approaching aircraft on radar. Once the air-traffic controller locks the radar on the plane, data relative to its location, direction, speed and altitude instantly becomes available to the personnel in the tower. Armed with that information, an air-traffic controller can guide a pilot to the runway. Although a variety of contradicting statements and theories are being floated, the Gabreski controller had perceived that the pilot of the Piper was disoriented and in a state of panic. He instructed Mr. Eaton to return to the Spadaro Airstrip, where visibility had significantly improved. The pilot paid heed to the air-traffic controller's instructions, terminated the radio transmission, altered his course and has not been seen or heard from since.

The search and rescue effort is ongoing. Investigators are baffled by the fact that no trace of evidence has been discovered that could lead them to the aircraft. "This is very, very unusual," said Mr. Jim Ridley, a high-ranking officer in the Long Island Group Civil Air Patrol. "Two weeks and not even a piece of debris? Yeah, quite unusual." The LIGCAP has organized a search-and-rescue effort and coordinated air and land dispatch covering a 34-mile area. The LIGCAP recruited the efforts of the Coast Guard, the Auxiliary Coast Guard, the National Guard, the Marine Patrol, SEMO (the State Emergency Management Operations), the NTSB and the Suffolk County Police Department to aid in the search. "It's an all-out effort and it still remains a mystery," concluded Mr. Ridley. "We're all frustrated."

Early on, police detectives had contemplated the possibility of foul play. They investigated the most recent transactions of Mr. Eaton's credit cards and bank accounts, but there had been no abnormal activity since his disappearance.

The search for the white Piper Cherokee and its pilot continues. The aircraft's registration numbers are N5067T. If anyone has any information regarding this incident, however insignificant, please contact the authorities. They promise to preserve confidentiality.

Richard Gere has become famous for playing leading men, yet he has remained one of Hollywood's most reclusive icons. Since he set foot on the road to celebrity in the 1970s, the silver-haired actor has starred in over 30 films. Although he tends to shy away from the public's eye, Gere managed to change his image from that of a good-looking Hollywood film actor to one of a devout Buddhist and international philanthropist.

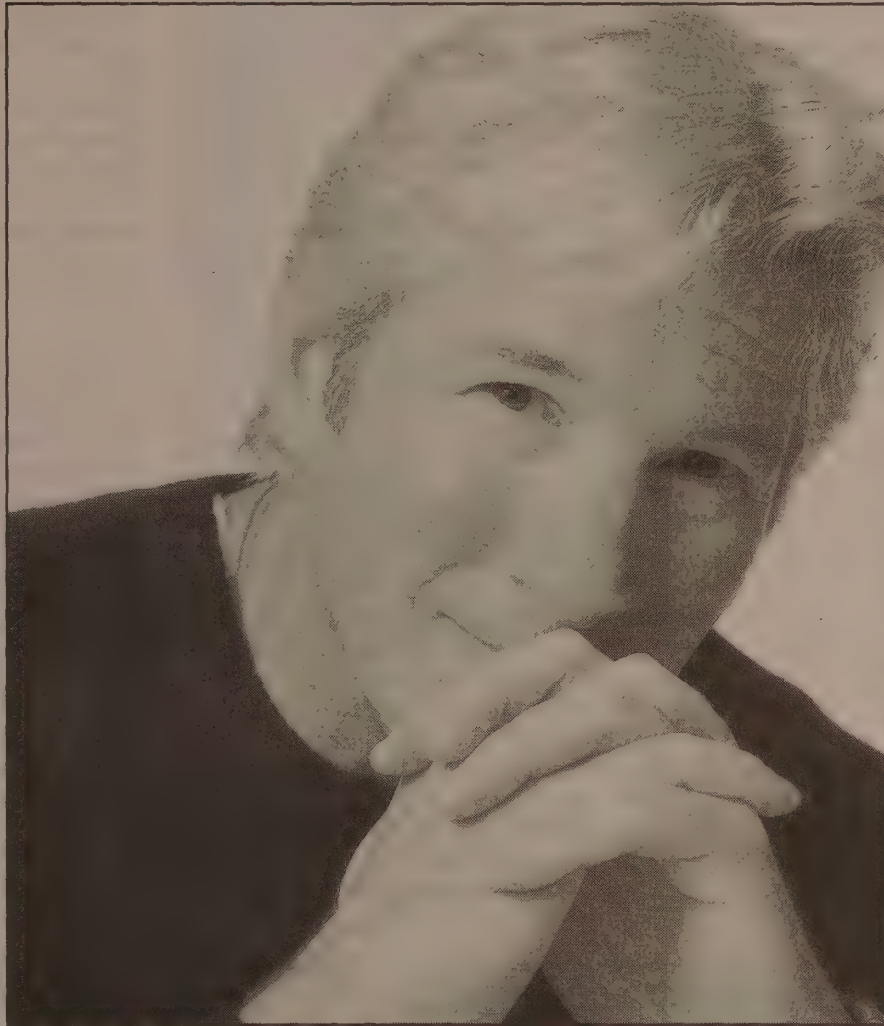

Born in Philadelphia in 1949, Gere was raised on a farm in Syracuse, NY with his four siblings. While growing up, he displayed talent as a musician and played many instruments, excelling on the trumpet. After high school, Gere received a gymnastics scholarship to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, where he studied drama and philosophy, but dropped out two years later to pursue his acting career.

In 1973, Gere made his acting debut in musical theater, performing the lead role in the original London stage version of Grease. His career and popularity soared in the early 1980s, with roles in the films American Gigolo and An Officer and a Gentleman. In 1990, Pretty Woman was released, grossing $464 million and sealing Gere's fate as one of the most successful actors of his generation. To date, the romantic comedy is one of the most successful films of its genre. Pretty Woman also allowed Gere to show off his musical talents, as he composed the piano solo he performs in the film. A slew of box office successes followed, including Somersby, Primal Fear and his onscreen reunion with Julia Roberts, Runaway Bride. After several nominations, Gere won a Golden Globe in 2002 for his performance in the film version of Chicago. His film, Bee Season, kicked off opening night of the Hamptons International Film Festival in 2005.

In 1991, Gere married supermodel Cindy Crawford at the Little Church of the West in Las Vegas, where he and his bride exchanged wedding bands made from aluminum foil. During their marriage, Gere was the first man ever to appear on the cover of Vogue and he and Crawford were named sexiest couple by People magazine. After continuous rumors that their marriage was falling apart, Gere and Crawford strayed far from their private nature and took out a full-page advertisement in The Times of London that read, "We got married because we love each other and we decided to make a life together. We are heterosexual and monogamous and take our commitment to each other very seriously. Reports of divorce are totally false. We remain very married. We both look forward to having a family. Marriage is hard enough without all these false speculations. Thoughts and words are very powerful, so please be responsible, truthful and kind."

Richard Gere Actor/Buddhist

Off screen, Gere is America's most famous Buddhist. He meditates daily, visits the Dalai Lama in India and has provided the financial means for His Holiness to visit America to give lectures on Buddhism.

Critics remained skeptical of the letter's sincerity as the couple ended their marriage only one year after its publication.

In 2002, Gere married actress Carey Lowell, best known for her role as a "Bond Girl" in the 1989 movie License to Kill and, more recently from the television drama "Law & Order." Like Gere, Lowell is a devoted Buddhist and supporter of the Dalai Lama. The couple has a son, Homer James Jigme (Jigme means "fearless" in Tibetan), who was born in 2000.

Gere and Lowell currently reside in North Haven, but recent rumors suggest that they plan to relocate farther south to Bridgehampton. This summer, the couple has been seen at Della Femina in East Hampton, eating sushi at Suki Zuki in Water Mill, attending Ross School concerts and lounging on several Southampton beaches. For the most part, however, they have remained detached from the Hamptons social scene. But as true supporters of the arts, Gere and Lowell have attended the Hamptons Film Festival and last year, the couple performed in a tribute to Spalding Gray at Guild Hall in East Hampton.

Off screen, Gere is America's most famous practicing Buddhist. His interest in the religion began after he met with Tibetans in Nepal almost thirty years ago. He meditates daily, visits the Dalai Lama in India and has provided the financial means for His Holiness to visit America to give lectures on Buddhism, resulting in an estimated one thousand converts. In 1991, he co-founded the Tibet House in New York City and has since created the Gere Foundation, which is dedicated to promoting awareness of the struggle in Tibet and also contributes directly to the Tibetan people in order to aid in ensuring the survival of their culture. In 1997, Gere published personal photographs representing his journey into Buddhism in the book titled Pilgrim. Because of his active role in the movement to free Tibet from Chinese control, Gere has been banned from entering China. While presenting at the Oscars in 1993, he used his on-air time to criticize the Chinese government, and was subsequently banned from presenting at the awards show. He has testified in front of Congress on Tibet's behalf many times and recently called for a boycott of the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing.

Gere is also an outspoken supporter of causes such as AIDS awareness, human rights and cultural preservation organizations. He is particularly committed to fighting the AIDS epidemic in India, where the highest number of infected patients in the world reside. He continues to work closely with the Naz Foundation, a non-profit organization based in New Delhi, that provides long-term health care for women and children infected with AIDS.

Earlier this year, Gere sparked great controversy when he repeatedly kissed Bollywood film actress Shilpa Shetty on the cheek and hand during an AIDS awareness event in New Delhi. This public display of affection, which was broadcast on Internet and television networks worldwide, was considered vulgar by Hindu nationalists. The disapproval prompted outrage, as protestors burned posters of the stars and chanted threatening phrases including "Death to Shetty." Both Gere and Shetty spoke publicly about the incident and referred to it as a non-issue, but a month later, an Indian court issued warrants for their arrests, ruling that the two stars had violated obscenity laws, a charge that could result in up to three months in prison. The case was later thrown out of court.

Whether it stems from his personal relationship with the Dalai Lama, his stint as People magazine's "Sexiest Man Alive" or his support of important global issues, Richard Gere has made his mark in many circles. The calm, cool American film star is one of the most respected actors of his time and displays charisma and intelligence both on and off the silver screen.

CAT TO BE AUCTIONED ON COURTHOUSE STEPS

The Burnese cat Heckles, owned by the estate of Morton Essex of Greenwich, Manhattan and Southampton, will be auctioned off on the courthouse steps of Southampton Town on Monday at 3 p.m. Sealed bids may be sent before noon on Friday to Southampton Town Clerk, Southampton, NY and will be opened during the auction.

The auction has been made necessary because of a dispute between the heirs of Morton Essex, which has been in the courts for more than two years.

A FAKE

The winner of the 2005 Hampton Classic and seventeen other events in the United States and abroad since that time, has been declared a fraud by a committee of experts assembled at Butler University in Eagleton, Texas. The cat, supposedly the pet of the King of Spain and bearing the name of L'Acculat de Hemers a Crox, was reported as a rare European Shorthair and supposedly worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

In fact, the cat was born in Camden, New Jersey in 1993 and raised on a farm in the Catskills until the fraud began in 2002.

Confessing to the crime is Harry Levinson of Sutton Place in Manhattan, who has pled guilty to the charge and has agreed to a plea bargain that will result in his serving the next 33 years in a Kentucky State Prison.

STOCKS SINK

Stocks on the New York Stock Exchange were down 112 points at noon today as brokers reacted to yesterday afternoon's news of the failure of two Egyptian Mau cats owned by Bill Gates to draw more than $3.2 million at an auction at Sotheby's. In the end, they sold for $2.9 million to a cat house in Dubai.

"We see this as the beginning of what may be a long downward trend," said Harry Mathis of Merrill Lynch. "Coupled with the failure of three Bengal kittens owned by George Steinbrenner to meet the minimum of $5.3 million two weeks ago, we are advising investors to be wary."

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Chiaroscuro

Life is just amazing to me.

One of the most tragic events I have ever experienced happened almost five years ago, and I'll never forget it. I was still in college when I heard that Kris Dalene, an East Hampton local and a high school friend of mine, was killed in a car accident while driving home. It sent a chill through the entire East Hampton community. Kris was a standout kid from a big family that everybody knew. He was a musician and the best drummer any of us had ever heard, dazzling audiences at local music events. It seemed like the whole town was following his musical career. I, along with just about everybody else, had bought his band's CD called "Leap of Faith."

And then just like that, he was gone.

The entire incident really spooked me. I have a sister who just got her driver's license and it worries me constantly.

Kris' family is resilient, however, and I recently learned that Tim Dalene, Kris' cousin, has rallied family and friends and has organized an art and music festival in East Hampton called Chiaroscuro in his honor. Tim wanted to do something for Kris, and his art and music festival has grown from an idea to one of the largest collaborations of music and art in the Hamptons, complete with nine bands and eleven artists, both local and non-local.

Chiaroscuro is being sponsored by Crossroads Music, an excellent music store in East Hampton, as well as the Lion's Club and

The late Kris Dalene.

Tim's organization NRO (no real organization) and everybody I know is going to go and listen to bands like The Isles and Blue Jackets who will be performing throughout the entire day and night. Having played sports and done theater together in high school, I met Tim and Josh Borsack, a custom guitar builder who also went to East Hampton High, at One Ocean in Bridgehampton for a drink to talk about Chiaroscuro. "It is going to be great. We have so many good bands and artists and a big stage along with local surf videos."

I swigged some Guinness, "This sounds awesome, man."

"So many people have been supporting this. We are even building a half pipe that kids can skate on."

It is so nice to see so many locals spring into action for such a good and meaningful cause. It is like something out of a movie. With the owner of Crossroads Music getting on board, and local artists like Christian Little and Katherine Dalene getting pieces ready, along with bands like Tequila Mockingbird, The Isles, Kiss Kiss, Consent of Kings, Bastards of Boom, Jet Jaguar, Hot Lips Houlihan and Igniter agreeing to perform, it really is a grassroots, local event. Even the East Hampton Lion's Club is involved, providing all of the food and The Baldon Group has agreed to pay for the insurance in full.

All I could think about was how I could support this event as well. And the best way for me to do that is to write about it here. So that's what I'm doing. Like Lilly Singer, a local photographer who will be there for Kris, I wanted to do my part.

And so, you should go to Chiaroscuro this Saturday at East Hampton Studios on 77 Industrial Road in Wainscott and check out all the activity that is going to happen between 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. You can call Tim at (631) 885-2558 if you have any questions about Chiaroscuro.

I'll see you there. Rock on.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Programs

NY - A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, lowers monthly payments by 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and prepayment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a FREE REPORT "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

2 HOURS 15 MINUTES ON THE HAMPTON JITNEY

By Dan Rattiner

It takes two hours and fifteen minutes for the Hampton Jitney to get from Manhattan to Bridgehampton. I generally get on at 86th Street and Third Avenue and I am usually pretty settled in by the time we are flying over the industrial heartland of Queens on the elevated Queens Midtown Expressway — the cemeteries and warehouses rolling by on the left, the big cranes from the port of New York marching by on the right.

Onboard there is a stewardess or steward who comes by with food and drinks, we have comfortable seats where we can take naps, if we choose to do that, or read the newspaper or magazines or fiddle with a variety of electronics. People watch movies, play videogames, check email on blackberries and listen to music on iPods.

I write stories for this newspaper on a small laptop while riding the Jitney. It is a good use of my time. No one is bothering me. I have enough battery power to last me the entire trip, if I need it. The cell phones are all turned off. No one speaks, except in hushed tones.

Well, I take that back. At the beginning of the trip, the steward takes out a microphone and explains the rules that will be in effect during the voyage. There is to be no smoking on the coach, not even in the lavatory in the back of the bus. You should try to stay in your seat at all times, but if you need to use the facilities, there are handrails to hold on to above the seats, on the edge of the luggage compartments. Passengers are allowed one emergency cell phone call per ride and only for a maximum of three minutes. And for passengers using electronic devices, please use earphones and keep the sound down to a minimum for the duration of the trip.

That's about it. Except for the price of the fare and that the payment is by credit card or cash. They also take personal checks, but only if you're a Hampton Jitney Club member.

At this point, we are stopping at the Airport Connection located at the Fresh Meadows Multiplex to see if anyone is waiting there to get on, which there isn't. And so now we are back on our way. It's time to power up my Dell X3. I have stories to tell.

As I reach into my shoulder bag on the empty seat next to me to get the laptop out, I think I hear something. It's somewhere up in front of me. And it's not outside the bus — the bus engine or the traffic outside — but something else, the soft sound of music being played over a tinny speaker somewhere. Obviously on the bus.

Who is guilty of this transgression? I recognize this sound. It's the sound of a movie soundtrack or song being played. Perhaps a song on a video game. I am certain of it now. It's coming from somebody playing an electronic device. And it must be very loud to get out of the tiny earphones and into the world.

I look toward the back of the heads of the two people sitting in the seats in front of me. They are a man and a woman of a certain age. Neither is wearing earphones. And then I look table lists the problems the system is already experiencing and the solutions LIPA proposes to solve them. Among the problems, equipment overload and voltage collapse are most frequent. Voltage collapse due to 69 kV double circuit outages, 138 kV bus outages and 138 kV cable outages happen often in Deerfield, Riverhead and at the Canal. There are also breaker outages and circuit and transformer overloads.

Reconfiguring substations, instituting load transfers or installing additional transformers can rectify some situations. Yet the solution for three accounts of voltage collapse/circuit overload is a "new circuit between Southampton and Bridgehampton." This is the solution under public scrutiny for its possible use of the dreaded aboveground lines. The solution includes four "proposed 69 kV transmission routes" by which the lines can run.

Option I is the Montauk Highway Route. It starts at the Southampton substation, runs with overhead lines on North Sea Rd., Windmill Rd., Nugent St., Hampton Rd. and Montauk Highway to the Sag Harbor Turnpike. A hybrid of overhead (O/H) and underground (U/G) lines run along the Sag Harbor Turnpike to the Bridgehampton substation. Total use of U/G lines is not considered an option as other routes are shorter and U/G are more costly. Listed advantages include the pre-existing "significant development." Disadvantages include the "high amount of tree trimming/removal," traffic disruption during construction, and the route's ranking as the longest one.

Option II is the David Whites Lane Route. Its course includes Seven Ponds Rd., Lower Seven Ponds Rd., Head of Pond Rd., Scuttle Hole Rd., and the Sag Harbor Turnpike. This route could be outfitted in all O/H, all U/G or a hybrid. The hybrid could use O/H for the agricultural areas and U/G for the residential ones, or vice versa. Option II is the shortest route and involves only moderate tree trimming. It also boasts "low exposure to the population" and an "opportunity to upgrade distribution at the same time." Listed disadvantages admit "local concerns about pole height." In places, pole height would grow by 4 to 26 inches. Base width would expand by 6 to 11 inches. Some wood poles would be replaced with steel ones. Added transmission could be placed on top of existing lines. Option II also admits that "some open space vista areas," as they put it, will be interrupted by lines. Yet, LIPA notes that this can be "mitigated with selective undergrounding if necessary." Option II is the entry with the most advantages and fewest disadvantages listed. It appears to be LIPA's favorite.

Option III is the Existing Transmission Route. No advantages are listed for this option. LIPA maintains that this is likely not a long-term option. LIPA also cites the narrowness of the path as a constraint on expansion. Yet, if considered, a hybrid of U/G and O/H is possible.

Option IV is the LIRR Route. The route would be all O/H along the LIRR to the Sag Harbor Turnpike with a hybrid used along the turnpike to Bridgehampton. While there would be no traffic interference, space for the new lines is limited and coordination with the LIRR would draw out construction. LIPA clearly states that this is not a "preferred option."

To see which option the Mother Earth prefers, an environmental assessment is in process. LIPA will hold an environmental impact hearing on Tuesday September 18 at the Southampton Inn on Hill Street from 3-5 p.m. and from 7-9 p.m.

to the row of seats beyond them and there he is — the culprit.

From the back of his head, I guess him to be about seventeen years of age. He has a blond buzz cut. He is wearing black over-the-ear headphones. And I can hear what he is listening to.

Ka chink, ka chink, ka chink, whoo, whoo da da da and a ka chink, ka chink, ka chink a woo.

My immediate thought is to call the steward. My laptop is fully booted up at this point. The icons are on the screen, waiting for me.

It seems odd that the elderly couple in front of me are not bothered by this young man's earphones — the young woman sitting across from the elderly couple doesn't seem concerned either.

This tinny, little music sound — I can't quite make out the words to the song — is going to be a distraction to me. I can't be writing a story and then have lyrics such as these interrupt me.

But then I think, really, can I make out any lyrics? I listen really hard. I cannot. It's not quite so loud that I could do that. Well then, instead of making any sort of scene on the bus, why don't I just try to put up with it? Let it meld into the background with the other noises — the engine sound, the tire sound, the soft conversation going on from somewhere in the back of the bus. Give it a try. You could always do something about it later.

Ka chink, ka chink, ka chink, whoo, whoo da da da and a ka chink, ka chink, ka chink a woo.

You know what is really odd? This kid two rows up, this kid is sitting ramrod straight. It's impossible. Nobody could be playing music this loud and not be bobbing to the beat. Impossible. What? Is he deaf?

I open a Microsoft Word file, consider how I want to begin a story about the 300th anniversary of Sag Harbor, type a few words, start over and then I am off and running. And the sound of the iPod, or whatever it is, blends successfully into the background.

About half an hour into the story, I finish the lemonade I have been drinking and lean forward with the empty container to put it in the leather pouch attached to the back of the seat in front of me. As I do, the tinny sounds coming from those earphones suddenly cease. Right in the middle of a song. And then the same song starts up again, but this time from the beginning.

And then I realize something. The sound is coming from the breast pocket of my shirt. And in there is my iPod. And it's turned on, with the songs coming out from the earphones, the battery therefore wasting away because nobody, such as me, is listening.

This is so embarrassing. The problem is me. I take the iPod out of my pocket, flip a few switches and it turns off. Then, I put it back in there. You uncouth lout, you, I think, referring to myself. I blush and scrunch down in my seat.

And I look around to see if anyone has noticed. No one has. In fact, most everyone is either just dozing off, already dozed off, leaning back in their seats with their heads turned to one side, their eyes closed and smiling happily.

They have, we ALL have, at least most recently, been listening to Jerry Lee Lewis sing "Great Balls of Fire." And they are having "Great Balls of Fire" dreams. Whatever they are.

Now, where was I in this story I'm writing?

public access to views of the mentioned areas. In it, placement of roads, power lines and signs — referred to as “sitting structures” — in an orderly way is promoted as a way to enhance the preservation of the views.

The State reports have been funded by both the Environmental Protection Fund and the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration, which are within the United States Department of Commerce.

Acting beyond the State of New York's guidelines, the Town of East Hampton Planning Board is proposing to take additional action to protect five areas of significance in the town. The main areas are Grassy Hollow in the Northwest Woods, Barnes Hole in Amagansett and parts of Old Montauk Highway. The Town Planning Board is currently in the process of holding town meetings concerning this proposal and is welcoming citizens' responses and inquiries. The Town's plan includes incorporating a strategy that will coincide with the State's plan to create a series of procedures to prevent unwanted development, and to fund needed improvements in an organized way, in order to achieve the desired results.

It is still unclear as to whether the plan will protect the interests of private landowners and homeowners who might be impacted by it. Those living in the aforementioned areas are urged to voice their concerns and ask questions at future public meetings.

The idea of our local and Federal government thinking long-term to create programs that protect the scenic areas is an ambitious proposal that will likely require significant funding. However, the cost of doing nothing may be greater. The views that make taking the backroads, sailing offshore and surfing so much more enjoyable are a valuable ingredient in the cocktail that makes the Hamptons such a desirable destination for residents. They make us pause and they bring us peace and beauty to our lives.

The scenic views of the Town of East Hampton belong not only to its residents, but to the future of this area.

market is run as such a family business on summer days that young, three-year-old Dante Sasso can be seen handing out cards to customers. Besides doing the retail business from the front of the market, Stuart's has several trucks to deliver fresh fish to “at least 60 local establishments, maybe 75,” said Bruce Sasso.

The Sassos are veterans in the seafood industry. Before taking over Stuart's, Charlotte managed the renowned Grossman's Fish Market in Montauk where she established a reputation for picking out the best fish, paying fair prices and always exhibiting professionalism. Her husband Bruce previously owned and operated Sasso's Seafoods for more than a decade. Over the years, the two have provided fish and lobsters for The Palm Restaurant, the Lobster Roll and James Lane Café. Even with this impressive resume the Sassos run Stuart's in such a friendly courteous manner and they offer advice on the best ways to prepare the fish you are purchasing, often suggesting wines and other treats to make your fish dinner extra special. It is clear that they love what they do and they plan on eventually having their son Dante carry on the family tradition at Stuart's.

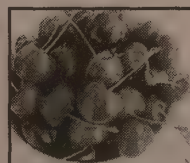

Charlotte mentioned that there is now also take-out, such as raw clambakes, cooked lobster dinners and raw bar available to go. Also included are cooked shellfish, along with the very special seafood hors d'oeuvres, homemade seafood salads and Stuart's favorite salads. There are nineteen take-out soups — that's right, nineteen different take-out soups. They also sell amazing desserts, my favorite being the Cappuccino Mousse Cake. But there also are fresh seasonal fruit pies, chocolate mud cake, carrot cake and Tiramisu.

While in Stuart's, I watched a woman buy a Stuart's t-shirt and hat for her son. Apparently when he comes to visit her from Chicago during the summer, he goes to Stuart's and makes her dinner daily.

Stuart's is worth the trouble of finding and visiting if you are not already a regular customer. If you go once you'll go back, because Stuart's is the best source for fresh, local seafood. It is part of a long Hamptons tradition of successful quality products, such as Tate's Cookies, Dreesen's Donuts and Iacono's poultry products that have been around for over 50 years. The amazing thing is that they are open year round, seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. So on a late winter Sunday afternoon you can still purchase choice fish for dinner. Their website is www.stuartseafood.com and they can be reached at (631) 267-6709.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #464 Learner's Permit, Pass With Prayer

My daughter, Chenoa, just got her learner's permit. I didn't learn to drive 'till I was 25 years old. It took me five attempts before I got my license, so my qualifications to teach someone else to drive are just slightly more impressive than Stevie Wonder's.

So I want all the Islanders to know that if they see a red Ford Aerostar going abnormally slow, riding its brakes, sneaking up on Stop signs, it's probably me, but I'd prefer it if everybody thought it was my daughter. I'm tired of being held responsible for my poor driving skills — let somebody else take the rap for a while.

We're driving all over the Island and I'm seeing parts of it in which I've never been lost in before. So many amazingly beautiful houses, so many private roads, so many narrow private roads, so many roads with no way to turn around without backing onto people's lawns, so many Island residents who can run really fast to protect flowerbeds. Who knew?

I am happy to report that most of the fence posts on Shelter Island are very sturdy and can stop a van. The ones that knock down easily can be righted in just a few minutes and any tire tracks leading to them can be easily covered with vines and leaves.

It's also nice to know that 99% of Shelter Island residents have functioning horns on their cars, SUVs and vans. And all the cars on Shelter Island can stop on a dime. I didn't know before now that men's cursing can be heard over rap music.

I didn't know there were so many radio stations with rap music. I didn't know that rap music causes homicidal thoughts in the brains of old flower children riding shotgun in a van with a new driver. I didn't know I had the strength to rip a radio out of the dashboard of my van.

I am having trouble remembering that there is no brake on the passenger side of the car. I have learned that my van starts to tip over when cornering at speeds greater than 20 mph. I am enjoying my re-acquaintance with the Lord. I know the driver can't drink and drive, but can the passenger drink when someone else is driving?

When the movie Alien came out, the ads read, "In space, no one can hear you scream." I've learned that no one can hear you scream in a minivan, over rap music, with the windows up.

When my daughter finally pulls into the driveway, she always says, "C'mon Mom, it wasn't that bad." I just throw open the door and hurl myself onto the front lawn, yelling, "LAND!"

EMBARRASSED BY FUNGAL TOENAILS?

If you are embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails at the beach or while swimming at the pool, we can help you! A severe fungal infection is a serious medical condition, requiring treatment. This problem will gradually get worse and will not go away by itself. Fungal Toenails are contagious and should be treated promptly. Dr. Orlandi has treated this condition hundreds and hundreds of times. He trained and practiced in Manhattan (Yorkville) for over 10 years and is now practicing in Long Island (Babylon Village). We have guided hundreds of patients who thought they would never get rid of this problem to obtain dramatic improvements and often normal toenails following treatment of their fungal conditions. We often treat very severe cases with dramatic results. Every patient is different and your healing ability, age and severity of your condition are all factors that may influence your outcome. This is by far the most common problem that I see in my office. If you have this problem call us and we will help you!!

We are located in beautiful Babylon Village directly South of Argyle Lake. We proudly serve Babylon Village and the surrounding areas with a brand new clean modern facility in a picturesque setting in an upscale community. Our facility has a large private parking lot for easy parking.

We Commonly Treat Severe Fungal Infections Of The Toenails.

If you have fungal toenails you should be aware that this problem is contagious and should be treated promptly. I have seen many children infected most likely from their parents. This problem could have been completely avoided by prompt treatment. Also the fungus infection will spread from toenail to toenail. This can develop into a serious problem with severe fungal nails that are thickened, discolored and odiferous causing pain with secondary bacterial infection. Early treatment is important and is much easier to treat. Many patients have come in to ask about laser treatment of their foot problems. I received in-depth comprehensive training in Newport Beach, California on CO2 Lasers and their use in the treatment of common soft tissue problems (warts, fungal & ingrown toe nails) occurring of the foot. The tremendous benefits that laser treatment could offer for your condition are many. As a surgeon my preference is to use the laser when possible. It is an advanced technology that reduces morbidity, usually eliminates hospitalization and provides better patient care. If you are a younger patient and are suffering from unsightly recalcitrant (hard to eliminate) fungal toenails, a minor surgery followed up with an application of antifungal medication directly to the nail bed may be used to help significantly reduce and may also help eliminate persistent fungal infections. Excellent results are commonly seen following treatment of this condition. Healthy clear toenails are a general indicator of good health and there is no more need to be embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails. Fungal toenails are extremely difficult to eliminate and may require more than one treatment.

FUNGAL TOENAILS

Pretty Fly For A Rabbi

The North Fork Gets A New And Sparkling Student Rabbi

By Zack O'Malley Greenburg

Four months ago, Rachel Larkin became the North Fork's newest lottery winner. Her prize? Not a million-dollar paycheck, not a new car, not a free Coke at the local gas station. Rachel's reward was the student rabbi position at the North Fork Reform Synagogue.

"I'm really looking forward to planting my rabbinical roots on the Island," says Larkin, 25, who chose NFRS with the first pick in Hebrew Union College's student rabbi assignment process. "I'm going there to see what the congregation's spiritual and educational needs are, but it will also be a learning experience for me."

On September 7, Larkin will officially take the rabbinical reins at NFRS. The congregation – founded in 1992 with a newspaper ad and the plea "I don't know any other Jews out here!" – has grown to include 30 families and 19 individual members. Lacking the resources to build its own synagogue or hire a full-time rabbi, NFRS shares space with the Cutchogue Presbyterian Church and relies on student rabbis like Larkin for spiritual leadership. Larkin will become the eighth such student to occupy the NFRS pulpit.

"Each new student rabbi brings us a fresh point of view that enriches our experience as we pray, celebrate and study together," says NFRS President Ellen Zimmerman. "Rachel visited us this spring to get acquainted and we were impressed by her warmth and enthusiasm."

Larkin grew up in Milford, CT, and became fond of Long Island during her undergraduate years at Hofstra, where she majored in Jewish Studies and served as the Vice President of the University's Hillel. Larkin cites the warmth of the NFRS congregation and her own love for the laid-back lifestyle of "beach people" as the two main reasons she chose to start her rabbinical career on the North Fork.

But life as a student rabbi is no day at the beach. On the first and third Sabbath of every month, Larkin will schlep from her Lynwood apartment all the way out to Cutchogue to perform her duties at NFRS. She will lead services on Friday nights and Saturday mornings, teach adult Torah study and youth Hebrew lessons Saturday afternoons, and figure out a time to complete schoolwork for Monday classes back at Hebrew Union in between. Larkin is especially looking forward to addressing some of the existential questions of Judaism with her congregants.

"I want to focus on the question of 'Why am I a reform Jew?' and deal with a different aspect every week," Larkin says. "I'm excited to learn with them because it's such a learning process on both ends and this congregation is so full of life."

Larkin will lead services with the help of a very special Torah. Also known as Scroll 627, the testament was rescued from the shtetl of Tabor in the Czech Republic during World War II, part of a collection of 1,564 Torah scrolls preserved by the Czech Memorial Scrolls Trust in London. NFRS acquired the hallowed Torah in 1994.

Around the same time, just across the whipping whitecaps of Long Island Sound, 12-year-old Larkin decided she wanted to become a rabbi. Whether this was the result of an uncanny coincidence or a connection between operator and instrument reminiscent of Harry Potter and his phoenix-feather wand is unclear. But Larkin realized that she wanted to do something to make the world a better place. Over the years, Larkin has honed her focus to a handful of causes and places: race relations and socioeconomic justice, Israel and New Orleans.

"It's not something I work on as a hobby," Larkin says. "It's my job to make the world a better place through a Jewish vein – not just for Jews, but for everyone – just Jewishly."

Like all Hebrew Union students, Larkin will be required to stay at her assigned congregation for a minimum of one year. If her enthusiasm about the North Fork is any indication, she may elect to stay longer. But either way, it seems that the congregants of NFRS have won a lottery of their own.

"It has been the privilege of our congregation to help shape the next generation of rabbis," says Sylvia Pafenyk, a founding member of NFRS. "We've had wonderful relations with the student rabbis and it's really been an education for students and congregants alike."

Dan's North Fork

OVER THE BARREL...

with Lenn Thompson

Macari Vineyards, up on Sound Avenue in Mattituck, is a winery that does things a little differently. Instead of one, full-time, on-site winemaker, they have two consultants who make different wines. One, Helmut Gangl, is an Austrian native. The other, Paola Valverde, hails from Chile.

In the vineyard, they've pioneered and evangelized many of the sustainable and biodynamic growing practices being put to use in many local vineyards these days.

With the release of Macari Vineyards 2005 Solo Uno, they are doing something else previously unseen on the North Fork—selling a 750ml bottle of wine for $100. It's the second wine produced on Long Island priced at or over the $100. The other is Wolfer Estate Vineyards Premier Cru Merlot, which retails for $125 in the Hamptons. Castello di Borghese, it should be noted, sold its 2001 Private Reserve blend for $195 per magnum, but that comes out to less than $100 per standard bottle.

The Solo Uno bottling—a blend of 45 percent merlot, 16 percent malbec, 17 percent cabernet sauvignon, 16 percent syrah, 4 percent cabernet franc and 2 percent petit verdot, is a deep, rich color that is almost black at its core. The nose is similarly dark with ripe black plum and blackberry aromas with wet earth, leather, and dark-roast coffee. The palate is a little brawny but not overly so, with similar flavors to the nose with a little meatiness (from that Malbec no doubt), terrific mouthfeel, medium-grip tannins and just a little alcohol heat on the long, coffee-and-toffee finish. Is it worth $100? That's not for me to say, but this is a young wine and its best days are ahead of it certainly. This one will last at least five years, but can be decanted for an hour or so now for immediate drinking.

If $100 seems like a lot to you—Macari has other, more reasonably priced wines worth checking out.

Each and every year, I find Macari's sauvignon blanc to be balanced and less-aggressive renditions of this wine that is up-and-coming locally. The 2006 release sells for $19 and carries on that tradition of quality. Citrusy and melon-inflected on the nose, there are also mineral and gentle—rather than aggressive—grassy notes here. Medium-bodied in the mouth, loads of lemon, lime and grapefruit are backed by subtle herbal and grassy flavors and plenty of appetite-whetting acidity. The nicely lengthy finish is all lemons and minerals. Shellfish and fresh chevre are no-brainer pairings with this wine.

Rose wines have gone from the trailer park to tables in fine restaurants in recent years—and local prices reflect that trend. Some local roses are being sold for almost $20 now making Macari Vineyards 2006 ($13) refreshing on a couple levels. Beyond the relative bargain pricing, this copper-colored wine offers soft, fruity flavors—strawberry and watermelon—with just a little earthiness and floral quality.

This blend of 75% Merlot, 16% Syrah, and 9% Cabernet Franc has just enough—and I mean just enough—acidity. Drink this one with Thanksgiving dinner this year.

Macari also produces the usual reds you'd expect—merlot, cabernet franc and various blends. But, two wines that you don't see much locally are among their most interesting offerings.

Macari Vineyards' 2005 Malbec ($22) is a bold, flavorful wine that puts the ripeness of the 2005 vintage front and center. It's loaded with intense black plum and black pepper aromas. The palate is rich and slightly meaty with more plum, pepper and a slightly juicy note on the mid-palate. The finish lingers nicely with a hint of spice. This wine signals the arrival of Malbec on the North Fork. Try it will char-grilled steak this summer.

One of the more aromatically intriguing wines I've tasted in a while, Macari Vineyards' 2005 Syrah ($22) isn't the wine for you if you like those overly fruity, extracted, almost-sweet shiraz wines from Australia. Its nose offers some cherry aromas, but also those of pine needles, eucalyptus, leather and mint. A decidedly Old World-style wine, dark cherry flavors are joined by pine resin, black pepper, leather and more eucalyptus. There is still some raw oak flavor here, but it's not overpowering and should fade with more bottle time.

To learn more about these wines, visit their tasting room, or their website www.macariwines.com.

Illegal Snacking

Local Millionaire Who Owns Snacking Company Gets Denied To Serve Snacks At His NF Home

By Jessica Gold

The North Fork of Long Island is home to some of Long Island's most creative people. Musicians live here as well as talented artists and authors. This small segment of Long Island is inhabited with some of the most inventive minds around. I guess that's why everyone has been kind of wondering about the owner of the house on the southwest corner of Village Lane and the Main Road in Cutchogue. What is the occupant doing? He's definitely falling into the "creative" and "inventive" categories.

Robert Ehrlich, who also owns Robert's American Gourmet Food Inc., which is the renowned company that makes Pirates Booty, show the house off; he took his snacks and put them out for serving and opened his house up to guests.

The end result has been a bit more traffic on the road passing his house and some slightly curious and possibly put-out neighbors. Mr. Ehrlich has stated that he's put so much work into the house that he just wants it to show it off. Residents wonder what Mr. Ehrlich's intention is in doing this....

It is so nice to see when somebody goes out and does something like this on the North Fork. Here, we have so many good natured people who want what is best for the community and for the world. Even our wealthy business people here are in charge of environmentally and health aware companies such as Robert's American Gourmet Food Inc. These are the things that really keep this wonderful area going, and will keep it going strongly into the future.

If Mr. Ehrlich will be looking for a new spot to serve his snacks, I can think of one place he should, my home of course!

Cocoa Booty, Chaos and other healthy snacks has been turning his property, essentially the land-marked house known as the Captain Hubbard/Edwards house, into a sort of snackbar. He has been open on Fridays and most weekends hosting games, serving iced tea, lemonade and snacks, and even showing a few movies for free. The catch is that he was apparently denied a permit to do this due to lack of a large enough parking area. Mr. Ehrlich seems to have his mind set on making use of the property in the way that he sees fit. He has a vision just like he did back in 1986 when he founded "Robert's American Gourmet on his belief that "no true American salad dressing had yet been defined." In addition to salad dressings, he went on to create some of the cleverest gourmet snacks around. We have tasted many of these snacks, and we have to say that many people here at the office are eating them right now. They are wonderful, and it is nice to know that there is a clever and nice guy behind the bags of goodies, especially the "Tings."

So, Mr. Ehrlich decided to open his house to the public for free. He painstakingly restored the house to where it's said to look like a "work of art". Seemingly doubtful that anyone would purchase the property; Mr. Ehrlich watched his dreams of turning it into a cafe or an antique's shop go down the proverbial drain. Still wanting to

Even though the North Fork Table has only been open for about fifteen months, the initial impressions we had when we first reviewed the restaurant, only a few days after it officially opened in May 2006, have been more than fulfilled. Chefs Gerry Hayden and his wife Claudia Fleming and their partners, Mike and Mary Mraz, who manage the front of house side of the business, brought very impressive Manhattan resumes to this quiet part of the North Fork. But this was not a guarantee of success, as others have found. What brought them to the position where the North Fork Table, after such a short time by restaurant standards, is rightly regarded one of the restaurant jewels of Long Island, has been their meticulous attention to detail, to their understanding of the likes and dislikes of the clientele, and to really conforming to their mission statement of "being committed to supporting the local agricultural and fishing communities, whenever possible, in order to raise awareness of the pristine bounty the North Fork of Long Island has to offer."

The menu is relatively short and there is also a five-course chef's set tasting menu that requires the participation of the whole table. We started with one of the appetizers that has become a firm favorite. Crispy cod and Yukon Gold potato cakes were beautifully crisp outside and soft and delicate inside. The truffled tartar sauce was appropriately tart and optimized the delicate tastes. The other appetizer proved to be even more intriguing and satisfying than its menu description of warm Satur farm baby leeks and chanterelle mushrooms with organic Iowa speck (a lightly smoked juniper flavored ham somewhat similar to prosciutto), soft cooked egg and summer truffle vinaigrette. This was an incredible visual and textural combination that tasted even better than it looked. All of the ingredients blended and nothing dominated. This certainly should be one of their signature dishes whenever the ingredients are available.

From the fascinating list of main courses, we opted for one fish and one meat. The pan braised, local wild striped bass was beautifully crisp and moist, and the large shrimps served with it were full of flavor, but the whole dish was lifted to a totally new level by the mélange of snow peas, Japanese eggplant and a sauce of tomato and coconut milk with enough chili added to give a very noticeable bite. Thankfully, they serve this dish with a spoon as well as a knife and fork. They also serve that great Tom Cat Bakery bread, so the bowl went back very clean!

Similarly, the pan roasted Long Island duck breast came cooked exactly as requested and the accompanying black olive potato gratin with endive, spinach and black Mission figs completed a dish full of deep rich tastes.

Desserts are the province of award-winning pastry chef Claudia Fleming, who also was responsible for the charming, light airy and unfussy but very comfortable décor of the restaurant. Choosing a dessert was perhaps the hardest task, but the one we chose more than exceeded our wildest expectations. Fragrant panna-cotta teamed with roasted figs, a tart Concord grape sorbet and candied pistachios is another dish that should be a signature item for the originality and simplicity that produced incredible mouth filling tastes.

We arrived early, but even early on this mid-week evening the restaurant continued to fill. It is always advisable to book ahead because the restaurant only seats just over fifty and such sumptuous dinner fare is never hurried. If you wish to eat at one of the most popular times on a Saturday, then you should try to book three to four weeks ahead of time.

This is an inn as well as a restaurant and there are four bedrooms that have proved to be very popular - after all you also get a Continental breakfast prepared by Gerry and Claudia!

The North Fork Table is open for dinner from 5pm and after September will be closed on Monday and Tuesday. They also close for the month of January.

Appetizers range from $12 to $22; Main courses are from $29 to $48. There is an excellent eclectic wine list, we drank a white from the Basque region of Spain. This was a very refreshing light wine reminiscent of a vino verdhe but one with enough body to work even with the Asian overtone fish dish. The Cuvee LC blended red wine from Channing Daughters was very good with the duck. Wines are from $8 to $12 by the glass and from $28 a bottle.

North Fork Table and its owners and very well trained staff fully deserve the success they have had and the plaudits they have received. This is a restaurant where you are made to feel welcome whether you simply want a salad and a glass of wine or a full meal. The service is friendly and knowledgeable and when you put all of these factors together with the truly world class food, you realize that you have spelled out the ingredients for producing the perfect eating experience.

Bonds Hits 756, But Michel Burgazzoli Plants Way More Flowers In A Season

By Phyllis Lombardi

There was an awful lot of attention given a few weeks back to a guy who did something 756 times – now even more. What he did, what Barry Bonds did, was hit a little ball in a big way. Home runs in a game we love, baseball.

Bonds, out there on that other coast, broke records for sure, and probably broke some hearts, too. But hearts, like everything else, heal. Mostly. And Bonds' accomplishment is applauded. Mostly.

Now 756 of anything seems pretty impressive. Like if I had $756 in my wallet or 756 pairs of shoes in my closet. Or even if I grew 756 tomatoes in one season.

But would North Forkers applaud such accomplishments? I wonder just what our home fork people would cheer when it comes to 756 or more. What number would make North Forkers proud? Do we have, on the North Fork, record-makers, record-breakers?

I suspect so. Now Barry Bonds is many things, though I've never heard him called beautiful. But Riverhead's Michel Burgazzoli is another story. She walks in beauty and brings beauty wherever she walks. Michel is a landscaper, a one-woman organization whose jobs are mainly in the Riverhead-Flanders area. She'll cut your lawn, of course, and trim your hedges. But more than that, much more.

Michel's flowers, in a month, maybe even a week, are planted 756 times. Over the years? Thousands and thousands of roses, marigolds, mums. Lilacs, lavender and lilies. Daffodils are her favorite. The colors, the golds, reds, blues, white. And the fragrance that seems to drift from Riverhead to Orient.

One of Michel's special gardens is in Flanders. Eleven years ago she planted about 150 hydrangeas in that garden and they're all big and blooming now. There's a rose arbor and stone paths put in by Michel's husband. Almost paradise.

So Michel, take a bow. If numbers mean anything, you're more than a contender.

The numbers on this next North Fork guy are impressive. He fixes cars, thousands of them, and has been doing so for more than 24 years. While I truly wish there were fewer cars on North Fork roads, I'm pleased Tony Antongeorgi of Tony's Complete Auto Repair is there to keep our cars and trucks running.

Tony's is a two-man business on Main Road in Mattituck. I confess I don't mind waiting for a quick repair by Tony because he's right next door to my favorite-in-the-whole-world ice cream place. So when Tony says my car will be ready in an hour and tells me to chill out, I do. Usually with two scoops.

Tony's is a small place, two lifts only in a pre-WWII building. But that building and courtesy are the only old fashioned things about the shop. They've got everything modern to fix up the latest Lexus (probably visiting from the other fork) to my husband's Chevy pick-up. Tony and numbers? Why, he passed 756 years and years ago!

Drive to Aquebogue in a car Tony just repaired and meet Jean Troyan Simmons. Jean's been making North Forkers look great for 42 years. Women mostly, but men and children, too.

Jean cuts hair, styles hair, trims hair, perms hair – and does whatever else makes hair look good. A graduate of Riverhead High School, Jean attended Patchogue Beauty School, carpooling from the North Fork with a few friends.

Think about it. Even if Jean "worked" on only 20 heads a week, that's over 1,000 heads a year. Times 42 years. Way to go, Jean.

Jean has cut toddlers' hair, permed great-grandmas' hair, styled the hair of nervous brides, trimmed the sideburns of bald guys, gone to the homes of those unable to come to her. Over the years she's helped thousands of North Forkers feel good about themselves.

A favorite customer? That would be Laura, Jean's 7-year-old grandchild.

Twice little Laura has donated her hair to Locks of Love, an organization providing hair for wigs for children who have long-term medical hair loss. Jean's proud of that.

Guess you get the picture. A pretty paltry number is baseball's 756. The North Fork's flowers, smooth-running cars and happy hair rack up the really amazing stats. Why, this fork should have its very own hall of fame with the folks we've just met in it as charter members. That's for the record.

THE Y FACTOR with Christian McLean

Wedding Pitfalls

Everyone loves a wedding. Though it costs you a fortune in gifts, hotels and travel, wedding season is a lot of fun. The problem is that it can take a toll on your body. There's dinner, dancing, cake and while those seem like they should be on the plus side, they have their pitfalls as well.

It's September and for many that means outdoor weddings. For some reason, everyone thinks that the moment Labor Day is over, it instantly becomes fall. The past weekend was sweltering – temperatures in the 90s, the blazing sun – and it was almost too much to bear for anyone in a black tuxedo. While what you wear to a wedding is dictated by the invitation, if it isn't a black tie event, put more than a minute's thought into what you're going to wear. The wrong suit can lead to overheating and even heat exhaustion. Wearing dark wool at an outdoor wedding is like sitting in a sauna. If you're the groom and you've decided on a more formal outdoor affair, it isn't a bad idea to think about doing the nuptials under an arbor or another type of shaded platform. Also, limit the service's length. The less time in direct sunlight, the better chance your guests will make it to the reception dry and healthy.

I know there's an open bar, but pace yourself. No one wants to be the "hammered guy" at a wedding. It looks bad in pictures, it looks worse in videos and the groom's parents will never forgive you. Besides just making an ass out of yourself, you are also doing a serious disservice to your body.

Drink plenty of water. We all know booze dehydrates, but dancing up a storm does, too. Think of it this way, when you exercise you wear shorts and a t-shirt, right? And the only people in the gym wearing pants and a long sleeved shirt are doing it to sweat more and burn more calories, right? Well, when you're wearing a suit or even a shirt and tie and you hit the dance floor, your added layers raise your body temperature forcing you to sweat in order to cool yourself down. The more you dance, the more you sweat. Add booze to the equation and you'll feel like a train wreck the next morning if you don't stay hydrated. As a guide, drink a glass of water for every glass of alcohol you consume. Also, try to drink as much water as you can before the wedding begins. It's always a good idea to start with a solid base.

While dancing can be great for burning calories, wedding food is the ultimate for putting them back in the body. At the cocktail hour, you've got crab cakes, mini-hotdogs, scallops wrapped in bacon and the list goes on. I once attended a wedding that served deep-fried grilled cheese sandwiches as hor d'oeuvres and, while they were fantastic to eat, they were not exactly good for the body. Just because trays full of food keep appearing in front of you like magic, it doesn't mean you have to eat from every one of them. Trust me, it's not considered rude to say, "No thank you." Plus, you still have dinner and dessert waiting for you.

Dinner is generally the healthiest meal you'll consume during a wedding. Chicken, fish or beef (depending on what you checked off) is usually matched with a starch and veggies. The portions and quality of food depend on the caterer, but it is important not to skip the meal because you'll need the sustenance to get you through the event. Desserts on the other hand are a nightmare. Buffet-style is even more frightening – all you can eat cheesecake, for example – so opt for less glutinous dishes. If there's fruit, that is probably the best option. Packed with vitamins, they are actually healthy. Plus, the natural sugars will give you a small burst of energy to get you through the night.

One last thing, if you're one of those people who are afraid of germs, pack some Purel. Shaking a hundred hands and kissing the new in-laws will definitely put you in germ's way. Another trick to stave off catching something is to get a good night's sleep the evening before and eat a sturdy breakfast the day of. Hopefully all this will prevent you from crashing at your next wedding.

Dancing Barefoot

The best way to stay young and healthy is to stay active. But contrary to popular Hamptons belief, this doesn't necessarily mean taking three intense core fusion classes in a row and then sitting in a sauna. What it means is finding joy in active endeavors. The other night I went to a wedding that took place in a big red barn in the middle of the Berkshires. An Irish band jammed on fiddles and mandolins. And everyone, from the two-year-old redheaded children to the 88-year-old silver-haired grandfather, kicked off their shoes and danced.

The music kept our limbs swinging from side to side. The energy of the others kept us bouncing. And the laughter kept us young. It was the best workout I've had in, well, since the last time I saw live music. Because when the music is filling your ears, it's difficult to keep it out of your limbs and heart. And then it's near impossible to remain still.

However, something I have learned along the way, something that seemingly everyone in that oversized red barn had learned, was that dancing shoes are best left at the door. Honestly, there is no better way to get down than in bare feet. While dancing is one of the best ways to lift your spirits and to get a great cardiovascular workout, you can seriously injure yourself if you are not in the proper attire. And weddings seem to foster these situations.

I've never heard of a wedding invitation that read "Active Attire." We may be planning for a wild night on the dance floor, but still we come in strapless dresses and heels. In this situation, the best thing you can do for the health of your back and feet is to leave those shoes at the door. They may look pretty and give you a few inches, but they cause serious misalignment when you're dancing around in them. In fact, many dance forms, such as Nia, are conducted barefoot for the health of your feet. And when little kids enroll in ballet classes they are given soft ballet slippers so as not to harm their growing feet. Of course, once you reach puberty in ballet you are given painfully rigid toe shoes and you may end up with black-and-blue toenails for a few weeks, but that's another article.

Barefoot dancing allows you to bounce and jump freely, without the perpetual fear of twisting an ankle. Your foundation is much wider when you have your whole foot to balance on, which means you are more likely to swing around freely and less likely to stumble. And when you're on the crowded dance floor at a wedding, the last thing you want to be is the big foot who's stomping all over all the barefoot boogiers' tootsies.

There are a few things you can do to care for your feet, which take a beating during an evening of barefoot dancing. While the muscles and joints in your feet won't be contorted by the restrictions of a high-heeled shoe, the bottoms of your feet will be more exposed.

This can cause blisters on the bottoms of the feet, of which I currently have two. They hurt a little bit, because every time I walk they are touching the ground. But because they touch the ground with the weight distributed throughout the foot, they are nowhere near as painful as a blister from a shoe. Still, they need to be cared for. People who dance barefoot often have thick calluses on their feet, which protect the feet from blistering. But to keep these calluses from tearing, you should moisturize your feet twice a day with a lanolin-based cream. This keeps this otherwise tough skin supple, which prevents tearing.

Another common problem that barefoot dancers experience is called stone bruises. This is a soreness that feels like a bruise on the bottom of the foot, but there is no discoloration. To protect stone bruises as you walk or dance, you can apply "pontoons" on both sides of the bruised area. Pontoons can be made of either adhesive felt or moleskin and this 1/8-inch elevation on either side of the bruise will protect it from contact with the ground.

Dancing barefoot, all in all, is one of the most fun ways to stay active. With a few simple measures to keep your feet happy, you'll find yourself rejuvenated and uplifted when you kick off your shoes and dance.

Brain Berries

Often referred to as "brain berries," blueberries may be small, but they have big health benefits and are an important part of a healthy diet. Besides being low in fat, calories and sodium, these little berries are bursting with dietary fiber, fructose and vitamins, which are all beneficial, but the most significant component is their high level of antioxidants. Researchers have rated blueberries as the highest capacitated fruit or vegetable to prevent glaucoma, heart disease, cancer, varicose veins and other ailments due to the antioxidants' incredible ability to prevent damage done by free radicals, which are formed when a weak bond splits, leaving a molecule with an odd, unpaired electron. In short, free radicals damage cells and tissues that lead to the aforementioned diseases, having destructive effects on the body – antioxidants prevent this from happening. Also, the dark pigments found in blueberries strengthen the support structures in the vascular system and the anthocyanin (an antioxidant) improves collagen in all body tissues.

The benefits of blueberries are nothing new. The British Air Force in WW II claimed that bilberries (a close relative of the blueberry) had beneficial effects on their night vision. Since then, studies have been conducted that produced results backing their claim, showing that bilberries and blueberries improve night vision by allowing the eyes to adjust faster to darkness. It has also been reported by researchers that eating three or more servings of blueberries a day may lower your risk of vision loss.

Still not convinced? The antioxidant in blueberries called ellagic acid blocks metabolic pathways that may lead to cancer. In fact, a study showed that those who ate blueberries were three times less likely to develop cancer than those who ate few or no blueberries. If that's not enough, blueberries have also been shown to prevent urinary tract infections, lower blood pressure and the soluble fiber found in blueberries lowers cholesterol.

In animal studies, researchers have found that blueberries reduce the effects of age-related conditions such as dementia or Alzheimer's. In one particular study done by the USDA Human Nutrition Research Center, laboratory rats were fed an amount of blueberry extractions equal to a human's one-cup a day. The researchers discovered that the blueberry-fed rats performed better in behavioral learning and memory than their counterparts. Also, stress levels in the rats were lower. Tests are currently being done on humans, but preliminary results already show that humans who consume a cup a day of blueberries test higher on motor skill tests.

But choose your berries wisely, as the beneficial antioxidants are almost undetectable in canned foods, cereals and other processed foods containing blueberries. So pass on the blueberry muffin and opt for blueberries mixed with other fruits or add them to your breakfast smoothie or granola. Other healthy ways to eat blueberries are mixed with yogurt or on top of cereal. For wine drinkers, although a glass of red wine is a good source of antioxidants, wine made from highbush blueberries contains 38% more. The recommended one cup of blueberries a day will only cost you about 80 calories and contains 14 milligrams of Vitamin C and .8 milligrams of Vitamin E (both antioxidants), plus anthocyanins and phenolics, which can also act as antioxidants.

Blueberries are in season from May to October, so head to the local farm stands to pick up some of these nutritious superstars. Only choose blueberries that are firm with a vibrant hue, and make sure the berries move freely to assure they aren't soft, damaged or have been thawed and refrozen. If you freeze your blueberries, don't worry, their nutritional value and taste will not be lost. Although blueberries are at the top, cranberries, raspberries, strawberries and blackberries are also high in antioxidants and would be a healthy addition to your diet. With health benefits like these in a single fruit, you can't go wrong. And they taste great, too!

Get The Glow

Easing into the fall not only suggests a wardrobe change, but one in your skin care routine. What was working well for you all summer, isn't going to be doing the same come late fall and winter. Trans epidermal water loss (TEWL) is no doubt greater in the cooler months. Exposure to cold air and then coming into the heat is asking for problems. Even something so simple as blowing our hair without applying a moisturizer can be irritating.

An intense skin care test was conducted on a group of 16-year-olds in Japan. One side of their face was treated with moisturizer cream and the other side had none. The results of the trial were the baseline measurements taken in the beginning and showed a rather high TWEL, suggestive of an impaired skin barrier. The conclusion suggested that the application of moisturizing cream, twice a day, is effective in improving sub clinical inflammation that is induced on the facial skin during winter months. In the summer months, a lightweight water based moisturizer is all that is needed, even that may be a bit much, however, those handy prepackaged washcloths manufactured by Dove and Olay include a light moisturizer infused into them, so you really don't need much more than that unless your skin is totally dry. In fact, the only reason you would put on a moisturizer would be to make sure you were getting a decent numbered SPF on your skin. An SPF of 15 is usually sufficient. But if you feel that your bronzer or lightweight makeup glides on more evenly with moisturizer, by all means, go with one. As a rule, you should try to avoid products that contain a petroleum or mineral oil. These are sure ways to clog your pores and make your skin greasy, winter or summer. Try using a hypoallergenic cream whether you are sensitive or not. Be wary of lanolin as well, known to increase acne. When the heat is turned on and the cold weather is upon us, your skin tends to go into a dry mode. If the skin is oily to begin with, putting on a heavy moisturizer will only add to the condition. Choosing the perfect moisturizer to carry over from summer to winter can be a daunting task, but doing a bit of research and really knowing your skin can make it easy. Keeping exfoliating in the winter to a bare minimum (once a week) will prevent your skin from drying out. Try to avoid creams and lotions that contain perfume. These usually include preservatives which can wreak havoc on your skin. Look for irritants such as sodium benzoate, propylene glycol, sodium laurel, found in a lot of soaps and sulfates — steer away from them. You don't have to use the most expensive creams either. Moisturizers that have the purest of ingredients and the least irritants won't break your purse. You just have to read the labels to decide the best for you. Or if you are really undecided, you may want to consider making an appointment with your dermatologist for a consultation.

Sometimes they will give you samples to see what agrees with your particular skin type. There is a great site, www.cosmeticcop.com, monitored by Paula Begoun, a makeup artist with lots of experience. Paula knows what works and sell her own line of products. But before she did that, she authored books and still does. Don't Go to the Cosmetic Counter Without Me is a best-selling bible to many makeup artists. She reviews all the lotions and potions that constantly flood the cosmetic counters. She will rate them with dollar signs from the least to the most expensive. She also gives her expert opinion on her findings. This makes cosmetic companies cringe, when she releases to the consumer a not-so-good product review. She blows the whistle on them and in turn, saves consumers a lot of money. Her latest (7th edition) is sold out on her website, but you can pick it up in a local bookstore. If they aren't carrying it, you can ask them to place an order. It's well worth the price ($27.95 in the bookstores, $22.95 on her site). Have your skin analyzed, choose your moisturizer carefully and, hopefully, you'll make it through the winter without any interruptions from the elements.

Under The Sea

As a true East Ender, you appreciate the ocean. A playful swim during a hot beach day. Salty sea air wafting into your windows on a cool, late summer evening. The seasonal bounty of fresh fish for dinner on your porch. That lovely kelp mask on your face and nori floating in your soup to comfort you after a stressful day. What, you aren't familiar with seaweed? Oh, then maybe I should tell you about some of the most nutritious plants on the planet, equally good for you inside and out!

For thousands of years, sea vegetables have been used for their medicinal, nutritional, and beautifying qualities. Beginning in Asia, they were staple food additives in Japanese cooking and a favored method of the Chinese to treat a series of health problems. When thyroid problems were revealed in the United States through a goiter surge in the 1700s, kelp seaweed was noted for its extremely high iodine content (deficiency was the cause of the problem). Eventually, iodine was added to salt, so sea veggies took a hidden seat, used industrially as a food thickener and emulsifier as well as in beauty aids, paint, paper, and similar products. It was not until health food stores emerged in the latter half of the twentieth century that seaweeds and algae became a presence again, this time in an array of supplements.

Often, when a person craves salty foods, what she is really craving is more nutritious food. The person may be experiencing a mineral deficiency from consuming too much of highly processed, chemical food that pervades supermarkets. This nutritional lack cannot be effectively fixed by common salt, as that too has been stripped of its nutrients. Sea vegetables offer a tremendous range of minerals, broader than any other food. Ocean minerals are the same as those found in human blood, so to consume a vegetable that has integrated all of them into its tissue is very wise. In addition to iodine, sea vegetables contain vitamins and amino acids, including high amounts of vitamin K, folate, magnesium, iron, lignans, and calcium. Because of this, seaweeds are considered useful not only in treating thyroid problems, but also in reducing cancer risk, birth defects and high blood pressure. They detoxify, counteract obesity and radiation, strengthen bones, improve digestion, and help make skin, teeth, hair, and nails shine.

When cooking with sea vegetables, it is extremely important to research where your seaweed originated, because polluted water means polluted seaweed! Speak to your health food store associates or order directly from a reputable producer. Maine Coast Sea Vegetables, www.seaveg.com, is noted for their sustainable harvesting practices, offering more than thirty products, and listing many free recipes on their website. Some seaweed requires rinsing, so read packages carefully. If you are salt sensitive, rinsing is extra important, so be thorough. Gradually add sea vegetables to your diet, as the taste and effects on your body can take some adjustment time. Try cutting up seaweed into small pieces to sprinkle in wraps, soups and salads. Add kombu when cooking dried beans, yielding a more nutritious and easily digested final product. . Use kelp flakes instead of salt.

For its fabulous beautifying qualities, one need only go to their nearest cosmetic supplier or day spa. There are many treatments that harness the power of seaweed to create a luster in hair, nails and skin. At home, it's as easy as taking a sheet of seaweed, cutting holes for your facial features, moistening, and relaxing! All of those great components will be absorbed into your skin. Create a more malleable mask by combining 1-2 tablespoon of kelp powder, 1/2 tablespoon of raw honey, 1/2 tablespoon aloe vera gel, and essential oil if desired. Leave this mask on for fifteen minutes. If your skin tends to be dry, do not allow it to set; spray sporadically with water. Rinse the mask off with warm water and your skin will glow!

Any ocean lover owes it to herself to try one of its best products. Embrace the seaweed!

Managing Your Age Wisely

Age Management Medicine (AMM) is an emerging subspecialty of medicine that studies the aging process. Currently there is no formal residency or fellowship in AMM, although, in my opinion within the decade this with become a formal subspecialty of medicine, not unlike cardiology. Patient care is highly individualized and the ultimate goal is using evidence-based medicine to prevent catastrophic health issues. As a bonus benefit, patients usually look younger and feel more youthful.

STRINGENT SCREENING

Hypertension

In May 2003, the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI) found that 90% of Americans who survive to old age will develop hypertension.

Cholesterol

High cholesterol is the major cause of coronary artery disease. The National Cholesterol Education Program -Adult Treatment Panel III (ATP III) recommends cholesterol screening starting at age twenty and once every five years onwards.

Prostate Cancer

Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in men. In 2002 the United States Preventative Task Force published their recommendations. Screening with digital rectal exam and prostate specific antigen (PSA) to begin at age fifty. AMM usually start screening at age 40.

Colon Cancer

55,000 Americans die each year from colorectal cancer. The United States Preventative Services task Force: Screening for Colorectal Cancer recommends screening starting at age 50. AMM programs usually start screening at 40.

Diabetes Screening

In an AMM program, all patients are screened for diabetes. Fasting blood glucose and glycosylated hemoglobin are used.

Osteoporosis Screening

Women

50% of postmenopausal women will have an osteoporosis-related fracture during their lives.

The U.S. Preventive Task force on Osteoporosis recommends routine screening for women aged 65. All female patients over age 40 should be screened.

Men

There is currently NO evidence-based guideline for the diagnosis and treatment of osteoporosis in men. This is a tremendous disservice to our male population, as approximately 25% of men will eventually experience an osteoporotic fracture. All male patients over age 50 should be screened.

Breast Cancer Screening

In 2001, almost 200,000 new cases of breast cancer were diagnosed in the USA, and 40,200 women died from the disease. The current recommendation is screening mammography every 12 months starting at age 40. Recently, MRI has been shown to be a usefully screening tool for breast cancer especially in younger women.

Cervical Cancer Screening

Screening should begin approximately three years after the onset of vaginal intercourse but no later than age 21. Screening should be performed annually.

NUTRITION

The average American gains 40 pounds between the age of 20 and 40. Every year in the United States, 300,000 adults die from causes related to excess body fat. The key to proper nutrition is low-glycemic foods.

EXERCISE

There are multiple benefits to exercise:

Improves cardiovascular and respiratory function

Weight loss

Improves functioning of the immune system

Together with diet modification, decrease the risk of metabolic syndrome

Reduces the risk of osteoporosis

STRESS MANAGEMENT

This critical part of the optimal health equation is often ignored. Cortisol is one of the stress hormones made in the adrenal glands. High levels of cortisol affect the way our body utilizes insulin, predisposing us to the metabolic syndrome. AMM programs approach stress management in a formal way.

HORMONE MODULATION

Hormones are chemical messengers and hormonal balance is essential for optimal health. The goal is to carefully restore key hormones to youthful levels. Levels are carefully monitored with a constant survey for side effects.

In conclusion, there is a relatively new subspecialty in medicine that allows you to manage your aging process. It uses a multimodal approach, based on scientific data, to keep patients healthy and youthful.

Breakthrough Treatments Let You Laugh At Wrinkles

Summer is over and your tan (which you know you shouldn't have, but got anyway) is fading. And, like an old oak tree that added another ring to show its age, you now see three new age spots, four more "crow's-feet" and your cheeks are hanging one-eighth of an inch lower. Yes, I know you've been standing in front of the mirror, counting each and every imperfection!

How did this happen, you wonder. And, more importantly, how can you stop it from worsening without undergoing painful surgeries and weeks of hiding out while healing?

Alexander Covey M.D., cosmetic surgeon and director of East End Laser Care and author of "Forget the Knife: A Guide to Cosmetic Rejuvenation Without Surgery" (Mill City Press, 2007), tells us that many factors contribute to how a person will look as they age.

Our skin takes a beating – from the sun, environment, smoking, stress and fatigue and from the general wear and tear of protecting our bodies. As we age, collagen and elastin, the building blocks of our skin, weaken and wear down leaving behind wrinkles, sagging, loss of volume and poor skin tone and texture.

"Thankfully there are many truly effective non-surgical treatments to help repair and rejuvenate your skin without recovery and downtime," says Dr. Covey. "Two of the most popular are the new FDA approved Thermage NXT and the Fraxel II Laser. Combined together as ThermoFrax, these treatments can help you restore your smooth, younger looking skin naturally."

The new updated Thermage NXT is one of the most technologically advanced non-surgical treatments.

Using radio frequency energy, Thermage NXT works in the deeper layers of your skin to firm up loose and sagging skin. Originally known as the "Non-Surgical Facelift," Thermage NXT tightens skin on your face, neck and body including your eyes, eyelids, lips, jowls, neck, legs, arms, hands and tummy easier than ever before.

Dr. Marianne Rogers, a 40-year-old public health specialist and lecturer from England wanted to use Thermage NXT to revive her tired and listless look. She came all the way to New York to see Dr. Covey and explained, "I don't feel that old but my face, especially my eyes, were letting me down. I came in for Thermage NXT to lift and rejuvenate my eyelids and upper eyebrow area helping my face look as young as I feel."

Fraxel II Laser is the revolutionary breakthrough treatment for skin resurfacing, wrinkles, age spots, sun damage, melasma (pigment changes due to hormones), and acne scars. "By treating only a very small fraction of skin at a time without "ablating" or removing the outer layer of skin, the Fraxel II Laser can give you the same dramatic rejuvenation results as older invasive laser treatments but without the long recovery time," says Dr. Covey.

"I take better care of myself now as a 50-year-old than I did when I was 30 but my face didn't look it," explains Eileen Priviot of Quogue. "I had brown spots from my sun-worshipping days and crow's feet around my eyes. Dr. Covey used Fraxel II on my face and the brown spots and wrinkles disappeared. My skin is the smoothes that it has ever been."

ThermoFrax is one of the best combination treatments available for overall facial rejuvenation, but there are many other options to help you look your best. "With so many advances in non-surgical treatments, I am able to offer each person a truly safe, customized approach to easily help them achieve the younger look they desire," says Dr. Covey.

Other popular treatments include Botox and dermal fillers such as Restylane, Juvederm, Radiesse and Perlane to smooth wrinkles, plump up lips and replace lost volume; Intense Pulsed Light (IPL) and other laser treatments to eliminate brown spots, face and neck redness, broken blood vessels, acne, acne scarring and unwanted hair; Microdermabrasion and GentleWaves LED Photomodulation to refresh your skin; and LipoDissolve and Mesotherapy for fat and cellulite reduction.

To find out more, schedule a FREE consultation with Dr. Covey in Southampton, Center Moriches, or Manhattan by calling 1-800-403-7268. Join Dr. Covey for his seminar on "New Cosmetic Procedures" on Tuesday Oct 2nd at 6 pm at the Inn at East Wind in Wading River. Refreshments will be served. Seating is limited so call today to register. Visit www.eastend-lasercare.com.

Dr. Covey is board-certified, a Fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery and was cited this year, for the fifth year in a row, by the Castle Connolly Guide as one of the "Top Doctors in New York."

EAST END KID: LEMON AID

By Emily Hart Post

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

I am not a hedge fund manager – hey, I'm only six, but I do know that hedge fund men and women have been a driving force at the Robin Hood Foundation. I know the Robin Hood story and some of the kids from my school played Robin Hood selling lemonade at locations in the Hamptons to raise money to help poor and underprivileged families. Our location was outside Stevenson's Toys – a great location right in Southampton. We are learning how right it is to help others.

All Tied Up

Blue blazer wearing preppies, skinny jean rocking emo kids and white collar corporate execs take note; it's unofficially autumn which means it's time to throw the flip flops in the back of the closet and get ready to get back to work, whether it be at the University library, local record store or Wall Street. And as the endless summer sun gives way to Technicolor trees, it's only natural for fashion to do the same, as linens and khaki shorts get retired and wool sweaters and tweed jackets make their way out of chests and closets across the Northeast.

Whether you are heading back to school, going out on tour or suiting up for another day at the office, there is an endless array of neckwear available to spice up your wardrobe.

A look perfected by the Beatles and the Kinks and revitalized by Franz Ferdinand and other European art punks is the sleek, stylish suited rock star. Chic and minimal in design, art kids across the globe have embraced the look since the rise of proto-punk and dance rock in 2003 and now designers have taken a cue from the coolest of the cool. That's right, skinny ties are in this fall. Having been embraced by the punk community for years as an informal interpretation of formal wear, the skinny tie has made a resurgence with kids who dye their hair black and wear jeans so tight they risk cutting off their circulation (Oh, how we suffer for fashion). While the look is certainly not for the beer belly crew, if you are nineteen, weigh a hundred and nothing and are learning how to play guitar, you may want to invest in a skinny tie. A true proto-punk would pick up his or her skinny tie at a dead-end thrift store, but if you're looking for something that doesn't need to be washed after purchase, check out British designer KJ Beckett's line of skinny silk ties.

Ok, so you weren't haunting the Lower East Side in 1978, nor have you ever been to CBGB's and you aren't planning on wearing black eyeliner any time soon. It's ok, the last thing anyone needs to see is a 40-year-old father of two trying to squeeze into a pair of women's size zero jeans and start a screamo band. Truth is, while neckwear has been adopted by the youth, it's not exactly meant for them. True neckwear is for men with jobs and nice cars and responsibilities. For these serious men there is only one way to go, the bowtie. For years the bowtie has been the favorite for men with literary desires and economic minds, however a young face can certainly transform the formal look into something fresh, even hip. Think a young Indiana Jones and it doesn't get much cooler than Indiana Jones. If you're afraid a bowtie may make you look like you've got the proverbial stick up your butt, check out Vineyard Vine's vibrant designs, which include everything from lobsters and whales to bacon, egg and cheese sandwiches and reindeer. Just think, you could be the guy at happy hour wearing the breakfast sandwich bowtie. Now that's what I call badass.

While hip updated looks may sound like a good idea on paper, there is really nothing more timeless than a classic stripped power tie and the only place to get one, in my opinion, Brooks Brothers, the purveyor of classic American style. Every season Brooks Brothers unveils a series fresh designs based on classic themes. While the look is far from original, the modern versions of this classic are a gem that every man should have in his wardrobe. There are so many different color options and patterns that you're bound to find one that fits your fancy. Plus, if you're a little too thick for a skinny tie, stripes on a power tie will make it appear like you've been on a diet, which is never a bad thing.

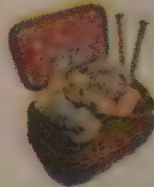

If all this talk of power ties and bow ties making you yawn, I feel your pain. With boredom out and for those looking for a truly unique, unconventional look to bring to the East End, you may want to look west to the land of ranchers, cowboys and outlaws. While bandanas are a fashionable and versatile piece of neckwear, the Bolo tie, also known as the cowboy tie, has recently made an unexpected comeback and one of its most fashionable ambassadors has been Carlos D, the bass player for NYC fashionista's Interpol.

Old school, new school, no school, whatever your style is, there is sure to be something for you to tie around your neck this fall.

— Michael P. McGregor

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

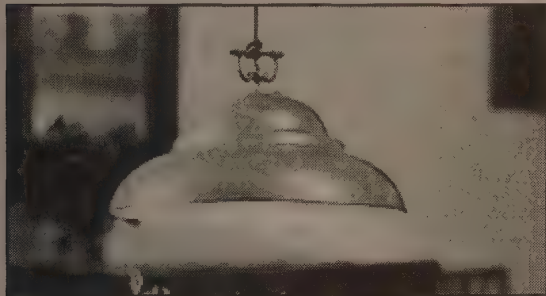

I see hints of autumn appearing on the treetops and in the morning, the cool fall breezes start off the day. It's amazing how summer flew by and the stores are slowly filling their shelves with Halloween costumes and fall fashions, replacing the beach chairs, umbrellas and beachwear. Let's kick off this week with some fall shopping!

Let's start with shoes, shoes and more shoes that are currently on sale at 50% off at The Shoe Vixen's annual summer shoe sale, located at 487 Montauk Highway in East Quogue. This is the sale we have been waiting for, so get going while the supply lasts...I'm there!

Hampton Interiors, Inc. at 471 Montauk Highway in East Quogue, offers the same service and attention that you found at the Southampton and Riverhead locations. Hampton Interiors are the manufacturers of fine upholstered furniture and currently has a full line of wall upholstery, balloon shades, Roman shades, cornices, soft valences, cushions, shades, duettes, silhouettes, luminette, wood blinds, shutters and, of course, reupholstery. Windows & Walls Unlimited on County Road 39 in Southampton is having a big sale on Hunter Douglas products, drapery, slipcovers and cushions. Give Linda and Paul a call for more details at (631) 287-1515.

Bridgehampton's Country Gear Ltd. is filling the store with lots of new inventory that includes furnishings, lighting and accessories. You will be surprised when you step into this beautifully decorated shop to see pieces imported from Italy that will look absolutely smashing in your home!

Country Gear Ltd., Bridgehampton

Right across the street at B. Glorioso's new location, 2405 Main Street in Bridgehampton, you will step into an all-summer stock sale saving you up to 70% off ladies clothing and accessories. There are new fall fashions arriving weekly that include cocktail dresses, sweaters, t-shirts, hats, handbags, workout clothing and let's not forget owner Benita's handmade jewelry and specialty bridal and wedding party jewelry, that will knock your socks off.

Nearby at Blue Provence, also on Main Street in Bridgehampton, you will find bowls for every occasion. That's right, there are sugar bowls, soup bowls, French style breakfast bowls, rice, salad, cereal and pasta bowls, fiesta, batter, punch, mixing and even fish bowls. All of the above can be ceramic, pottery, wood, glass, brass, copper, silver, tin, wooden, bisque, enameled, wire and papier mâché. Stop in and see for yourself.

At Beviamo Fine Italian Gifts, 2415 Main Street, Bridgehampton, look for exquisite style and quality of casual and elegant Italian lifestyle merchandise. There is Murano art glass, Tuscan crystal, decanters, vases, stemware, Tutti Giorni-everyday, break resistant crystal wine glasses and Busatti linens that are hand woven on shuttle looms in Tuscany. Take a little trip to Italy in Bridge!

Look for the grand opening of the newest location of White's East Hampton on Main Street, which is featuring a Clinique bonus of All About Eyes Rich, a new solution for dark circles and puffy puffs. Any Clinique purchase of $21.50 or more affords you this bonus.

Stop in to see a complete line of products available with this special deal.

Now that we have all done the art show circuit this summer, I'm sure it's time to do some framing of those prints and special photographs that we have snapped. Stop in at V J S Studio, located at 24 Gingerbread Lane in East Hampton, for custom picture framing. A large selection of frames are available in gold leaf, traditional, one-of-a-kinds and more. Not to mention the friendly, knowledgeable service that you will get.

In Home on Main Street in Sag Harbor Village is a great source for fine furnishings, lighting and gifts for every occasion. The store is filled to the rafters, even on the second floor, with unique and comfy furniture in so many different styles and colors...new inventory keeps arriving so check in to find out what's new!

ON THE NORTH FORK: At 1670 Furniture House on Route 48 in Southold, look for the special handcrafted in New York State, Harden solid cherry furniture that is on sale and available in a wide selection of finishes. Interior design and window treatments are available for every room in the house. Open daily, except Wednesday, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

One of my favorites in Jamesport, Gloria Jewel, located at 1560 Main Street, has extended their special 20% off sale on denim throughout the month of September. Look for great ladies fashions and accessories and stock up for fall.

Until next week, ciao and happy end-of-summer shopping!

If your shop is having a sale, new inventory or you are a new business or have relocated, and you want everyone to know about it, please e-mail me at shop-till@danspapers.com or via fax at (631) 537-6755. I would love to hear all about it!

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Napeague Beach Loop

Heading east on Montauk Highway into Napeague, pass the Clam Bar and Napeague Meadow Road. Turn left when you see the Sea Crest Condominiums on the right side of the highway and the Hither Hills Racquet Club on the left. Follow Napeague Harbor Road north from Route 27, across the train tracks. Park on the shoulder, near the end of the road. Do not block the off-road vehicle access to the beach.

At the end of Napeague Harbor Road is the Hither Hills State Park Walking Dunes Trail. Enter this trail at the end of the road (a little to the right). There are elevations of 80 feet offering splendid views. At one point along this .75-mile loop-trail there is a great view of Napeague Harbor from atop a ridge of a walking dune. At another point, there is a freshwater wetland. Follow the arrows and look for the trail markers. Try to stay on the trail; this area is a natural wonder and deceptively fragile. You may wish to call State Parks for a trail guide (631) 669-1000.

Last weekend when my wife and I arrived at the end of Napeague Harbor Road, I wanted to hike and swim but she wanted to get caught up on her reading. We set up the umbrella on the widest section of beach, against the dunes out of the way of the "off-road vehicle highway."

I slathered insect repellent on myself, left some with my wife and went off on a hike. I walked back along the beach, continued south along the road about 0.4-mile (ten minutes). There is a driveway-like opening on the west side of the road, a white-rectangular trail blaze, and a Paumanok Path emblem on a utility pole on the left (east) side of the road. This is where the Paumanok Path (PP) crosses Napeague Harbor Road. There is informal parking on the shoulder of the road. I walked east on the Stephen Talkhouse section of the PP to Fresh Pond and Napeague Bay. The trail gradually rises onto a ridge. From the road, it is a 10-minute walk to Nominick's Overlook, where there is a panoramic view of the Atlantic shoreline. A spur trail branching off the PP to the right takes you there. The trail is well maintained and easy-to-follow. There are a few areas where the trail is wearing badly; overall, it is still stable and pleasant to walk. I met some people on the trail who were totally disoriented. They came from the Hither Hills Overlook parking area and hadn't realized that there were free maps and a large kiosk near the east end of the parking lot. This isn't surprising since your eyes are drawn to the dazzling view attainable from the lot's west end. The Overlook is on the north side of Route 27, about one mile east of where Montauk Parkway and Old Montauk Highway split. It is a large paved lot with several excellent informational kiosks.

After visiting Nominick's, I re-traced my steps back to the PP and soon followed the trail into a depression behind the oldest of the walking dunes. The fowler toads, sweet pepper bush, and swamp maple all lead me to believe there are wetlands just out of sight of the trail. The hickory, maple, and oak trees form a dense canopy allowing only dappled sunlight to reach the sparse understory. The trail is wide and brush free, so I didn't pick up any ticks. The trail gains elevation and the canopy becomes predominantly oak and hickory. At a trail crossing just before reaching the train tracks, the PP turns left to run parallel to the train tracks and then approaches the eastern edge of Fresh Pond.

After leaving the pond, the PP cuts across a wide woods road giving access to the edge of Fresh Pond. The trail that runs closest to the pond is not the PP but it meets back up with the PP north of the pond.

A one hour brisk walk from Nominick's brings you to Fresh Pond Landing Road, a wide, dirt road. Turn left and a short walk will take you to the Napeague Bay shoreline. I wasn't sure where the "Swimming Prohibited" sign applied, so I turned left and headed along the shore towards Goff Point. After about an hour, at a bend in the spit of land, there is a shortcut through to the harbor. I turned left and headed south about a mile to where I had left my wife on the beach. Walking along the shore I heard the sea birds calling and water lapping, and felt the fine sand pulling at my feet.

Go Fish

Last weekend was very windy, and the wind and scattered showers continued at the beginning of the week – not great for fishing. Weather forecasts were for two-to three-foot seas and 10 to 15 m.p.h. winds but, in reality, the seas were four to six feet and winds were 20 to 25 m.p.h.

Clients on the charter boat Reel Action, traveling about 100 miles offshore from Shinnecock to the West Atlantis canyon, caught a small swordfish at night and, at daybreak, the yellowfin bite was on. They boated 11 fish, with many more crashing the ocean's surface – quite a sight.

Scott of East End Bait & Tackle in Hampton Bays says there is good fluking in the ocean southeast of the Shinnecock inlet buoy at a 90-foot depth, and sea bass are starting to show up at the reef off Shinnecock. Some lucky inshore fluke fishermen using live peanut bunker, fishing from the sea buoy off Shinnecock inlet to the Cheesehouse, reported six keeper-sized fluke of up to five pounds each. Scott also says there are schoolie weakfish in Peconic Bay between Jessups Neck and Roses Grove, and porgies at Rogers Rock using clam chums and sandworms as bait.

Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle in Sag Harbors says there are cocktail-sized bluefish in the Peconic bays chasing schools of peanut bunker – just look for diving birds over the schools. Ken also reports snappers and porgies are still being caught in Sag Harbor bays.

Linda at Jamesport Bait & Tackle says there are big striped bass in Plum Gut and at Rogers Rock, and big porgies off Orient Point. Snapper fishing off the docks and bulkheads in the Peconics has been great fun for children in the last few weeks.

Harvey Bennett of Amagansett's Tackle Shop tells us a customer brought in a 41-inch striped bass caught at Goff Point in Napeague Harbor on a plug lure. Paulie A. of Paulie's Tackle in Montauk says a customer caught a 30-pound striped bass in the surf at night north of the Montauk Lighthouse at Jones Reef, and another customer weighed in a 41-pound striper caught on eels south of the Lighthouse last Saturday night.

Ed of Star Island Yacht Club and Marina, Montauk, reports Jerry and Justin caught four yellowfin tuna (weighing up to 100 pounds each), 12 albacore weighing up to 50 pounds each, two big-eye tuna weighing in at up to 200 pounds each while trolling 16 miles west of the Dip offshore. They also hooked and released an estimated 400-pound blue marlin.

Chris at Westlake Marina in Montauk says one customer caught several yellowfin tuna weighing up to 75 pounds, albacore up to 50 pounds, and Boomer Esiason's F.C.A. Montauk Slam tournament, part of the Redbone@large celebrity series benefiting the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, is next Wednesday through Friday, September 19 to 21, at Montauk Yacht Club.

Entrants in Southampton Cove's first annual fishing tournament in the Peconic bays last Saturday had a rough time with the weather but adult winners in the biggest bluefish category were Kyle Owen (first place) and Rich Firstenberg (second place, fishing on John Locke's boat). Young Patrick Maloney caught the largest fluke and the second-largest porgy. Raymond Hipner reeled in the largest porgy. Prizes for the winners were donated by Tight Lines Tackle, Sag Harbor.

Fall Boat Shows: the annual Tobay Beach Inwater Boat Show is two weekends, September 29-30 and October 6-8, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (adults $10, seniors $8, no charge for children 12 and under). The Norwalk (CT) Inwater Boat show runs September 20-23 from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. ($15 adults).

This weekend is HarborFest in Sag Harbor. The village's annual celebration will be especially gala because it's the 300th anniversary. One of the special events is the Sag Harbor Challenge Cup, which features several America's Cup 12-meter yachts racing in Noyac Bay on Friday through Sunday.

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

The Art of Sag Harbor

To celebrate Sag Harbor's 300th Anniversary, gallery owners Rebecca Cooper of The Gallery and Tulla Booth of Tulla Booth Gallery will be hosting a tour this Saturday, September 15 of eight local galleries, all nestled on Sag Harbor's charming Main Street. The walking tour begins promptly at 4:30 p.m. at the Windmill on the Wharf. Reservations are required, so call (631) 725-7707 to secure a spot.

Currently showing at The Gallery is the work of local artist Sheila Isham. Isham's large watercolor of an orange poppy commands attention, as do the works of Dan Welden, whose industrial feeling prints which look remarkably like pastel in muted neutrals with shots of color strike the viewer. Welden's innovative and environmentally friendly technique of solar plate printing is also making great waves. Whitney Hansen, Ted Asnis, Dallas Ernst, Amy Ernst and Barbara Thomas have pieces on display at The Gallery as well.

The Grenning Gallery has a different feel entirely from The Gallery. New arrivals from Stephen Bauman stun. His portrait, "The Girl," is executed with the accuracy but emotional intimacy of Renoir, and his impressionist cityscape, "West Morning," though mostly in greys, is teeming with life. One can nearly feel a chill breeze while taking in a wet winter day with a red light in the distance, provoking curiosity and arousal. Also in the Grenning Gallery is Classical sculpture "Today." Contemporary sculptor Cody Swanson approaches the human body using a classical medium, bronze, and classical poses such as contrapposto (TK spelling) showing changes in the aesthetic ideal of the human form over two thousand years – the change is surprisingly subtle, yet evident and appealing to observe.

At Karin Sanders Fine Art Gallery, Ashley Collins' collection On Horses will be showing through September 24, to coincide with the Hampton Classic. Large scale mixed-media works on canvas make this any horse enthusiast's dream show. Even if riding isn't your choice pastime, the sheer size and archaic depictions of rider and horse will capture attention.

Star Struck, a show featuring iconic celebrity and fashion photographs debuted at Tulla Booth Gallery recently and ran through September 12. The Tulla Booth Gallery is unique in that it houses fine art photography as varied as a perfect ocean curl, to the surrealistic style of famed Harper's Bazaar photographer Bill Silano.

Artist in residence and Vignoli Gallery owner, Fernando Torres Vignoli has a permanent exhibition at his Sag Harbor Gallery. Most recently the prolific native Brazilian artist has produced "Interior of my Exterior," a blending of psychology and visualization of that mentality on the canvas through shaded, angular interiors. A subject Vignoli seems to be consumed by – depicting the soul through building/house interiors- does not lose its poignancy through the artist's many different conceptions.

Since 2003, Cuca Romley has been exclusively represented by the Winter Tree Gallery. Her etchings are meticulously done with the patience needed when etchings first came about. She carefully engraves her intricate designs on the etching ground that covers a copper plate. After the acid has etched the lines into the copper, she engraves the details into the plate with a buril until the image is completed. The image of this original plate is then transferred to a background color. For each individual print, a master printer must ink both etched plates and wipe the surfaces clean. The aquatint plate prints the background color on the first pass through the etching press while the paper is held in place by the roller, the plate with lines is placed precisely where the aquatint had been positioned on the bed of the press, the paper is then lowered for a second pass through the press and this completes the printing process. After the printing ink has dried for a couple of days, the etching is ready for the hand coloring (www.cucaromley.com). Each print can take up to five hours to color. Her country scenes channel folk art, with two dimensional landscapes and people performing manual labor or just going about their daily life. Romley captures the bounty in simplicity of life through her sprawling tree branches and her bicyclist during a pumpkin harvest, to name a few.

Romany Kramoris Gallery is featuring beautiful tables, which are on display in the window right now. The furniture is functional but made with clear glass nuggets so it's extremely appealing. An inn table, side table, large box and a hat box are the pieces currently for sale. The gallery is known for its eclectic mix of fine arts and crafts including blown glass, world crafts, music, cards and books.

Although listed in the Press release, the Prudential Art Space will not be participating in Saturday's event. Variety is boundless in this exciting tour. From modern flare to neoclassical sculpture, the galleries each have their own distinct vision ensuring an engaging afternoon - don't miss the opportunity to glimpse into the world of these artists.

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Once

A love story about two lonely, unloved people who find each other and don't really fall in love. Interspersed with boring music, this film is only for the weak of heart who want to watch a story about uninteresting people.

No End In Sight

This critically acclaimed documentary examines what went wrong with America's invasion of Iraq. It's a fully comprehensive and fascinating – albeit unnerving – look at the Bush administration's steps and missteps in the Mideast. But, as the title suggests, it doesn't conjure up much of a resolution of its own.

2 Days in Paris

The 21st century Woody Allen and Diane Keaton – Adam Goldberg and Julie Deply – find their perfect romantic comedy in this smart and side-splitting movie about an American trying to keep his relationship alive in his girlfriend's alienating French city.

Eastern Promises

Crazy cult director David Cronenberg lends his suspenseful and unsettling tone to this drama/thriller starring Naomi Watts and Viggo Mortensen that looks like Memento and 21 Grams all at once – but not without its own originality. The story about a compassionate midwife who, through one of her patients, accidentally gets involved in the Russian mafia and takes the audience through London's seedy underbelly towards possible, though unlikely, retribution in what is sure to be a critic favorite.

The Brave One

Jodie Foster stars as, still, one tough chick in this film about a woman seeking revenge on an assailant who wounded her and murdered her fiancé. While the story seems to add little nuance to the revenge genre, which has been increasingly popular this summer, it still stars Jodie Foster as, again, one tough chick, and is therefore worth watching.

Mr. Woodcock

Why is Susan Sarandon in this movie? The sexual innuendo in that title is no accident, nor is the placement of two basketballs on either side of Billy Bob Thornton on the movie poster in this, er, film about a boy trying to stop his mother from marrying his gym teacher, which actually makes me uncomfortable to even write about.

Across The Universe

Two kids of the 1960s fall in love and are then torn apart in this metaphysical, multi-colored musical of Beatles songs, which is a lot more impressive and less ridiculous than it suddenly sounds in that description.

Living in a political vacuum as we do, I find it propelling me into the past for a breath of untainted restoration. The good old Western survives for just that purpose. When the meaning of good and bad, and virtue and villainy have been swift-boated to a watery grave, we float aimlessly on a skittish raft, certain of no rescue. Then, miraculously, the nightmare is surprised by the staccato blare of a bugle – the Cavalry is on the way! The Western offers us some sureties. The good guys wear white hats, the bad guys the black hats. The swift smirking-smearers had many believing that the wounded, decorated veterans were bad guys for being against war and the war perpetrators heroes even though they'd all wormed their way out of actual participation in warfare. But we can count on who and what is good in the dusty, crusty Western.

The new, old-fashioned 3:10 to Yuma is faithful to the classic horse opera and feels no need to re-invent the genre. Instead, it banks heavily on its very bankable star, Russell Crowe and he rides the role with Cavalry assurance to glory. (And, he's the bad guy in a black hat.) The good guy, Dan Evans, is an extremely fine Christian Bale. His cadaverous jaws lock onto convincing pain. He'd been a Union army sharpshooter. Wounded and partially maimed, he is now homesteading in the Arizona territory, still fighting-fighting to keep his land. Bad weather has the predatory bankers of flourishing capitalism, beating at his doors. His baleful goodness is almost holy. Crowe's outlaw is as ruthless as he is charming and, as primitive as he is intellectual. Both actors, Crowe and Bale, are quintessential American range riders. Crowe is a native New Zealander and Bale is from Wales. Can these guys act?

A frenzy of gunfire emblazons the screen as it rips up the film's sensitivity, however, the molten fury sets the stage for the keener combat to come: a mental and physical duel between two very different but equally strong men. This is the day they meet. Crowe is holding up an armored coach being protected by Pinkerton agents armed with a

3:10 To Yuma

primitive machine gun that helps to unleash unbridled violence. Bale has happened by and helps capture Crowe and, more. Bale is no hero but, he's in dire need of money. His barn has been burned by his creditors and threatened to raze the entire ranch. For payment of enough money to save the homestead and the respect of his wife and two sons, he agrees to escort the prisoner to the close by town of Contention, where he'll be taken by the Feds on the 3:10 train to Yuma for prosecution. It is obvious to him that it won't be easy. Crowe's killer-outlaw is a wily, bright and sly conniver, able to devise all sorts of escapes.

Tougher still, Ben's partner has gotten away with what's left of the gang and, he is brazenly terrifying and waiting.

3:10 to Yuma was originally adapted to the screen in 1957 from a short story by Elmore Leonard. Directed by Delmer Daves, it's been somewhat of a cult favorite. It's by-the-books, straight-up Cowboys vs. Outlaws format has only been padded to a 2 hour length and beefed-up for more bloodshed so, don't expect much novelty. An exception is Crowe's sinfully nasty sidekick as played by Ben Foster. His androgynous, lithe and strangely different notion of what we expect an Old West psychotic to be, can really shake you up. It ably abets the powerful performances of the leads and adds an extra layer of thought by the new director, James Mangold (Walk The Line). The question of masculinity is as present as the frothy horses. Christian Bale's gaunt pride of Evans' struggling to reclaim his wife (Gretchen Mol) smacks of impotent sadness whereas, Crowe's artistic sociopath Ben Wade, enjoys a dominating freedom, reveling in the hatred he attracts. Evans' teenage son (Logan Lerman) considers him a wimp and, in a way looks up to Wade. Dan Evans maintains honor above all but is he the man he's expected to be? And, what does the audience expect? Of course, there's the ultimate showdown. In this case, it is big and it long and, as expected. A surprise? Look for a grizzly bearded Peter Fonda.

What's new about 3:10 to Yuma is its different Box Office category, plunked down between the top Blockbuster's popcorn tier and, at the bottom, feisty Independents. 3:10's distributor, Lionsgate appears to be backing the sturdy entertainments the Golden Age studios thrived on.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at Major Film and TV award competitions including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. Sarah Halsey assists him.

When I received an e-mail from Slow Food Long Island announcing the North Fork Foodie Tour it was music to my ears. My friend Maureen and I scooted over to the North Fork last Sunday to attend. The event was an informative adventure and a terrific lesson in the geography of the North Fork.

Sponsored by the North Fork Reform Synagogue the tour celebrated the bounty of the region. A map of the thirteen farm, vineyard and aquaculture locations was provided and we were off on our own to go behind the scenes for special talks, tastings and tours.

There were some time restrictions for the events spread out from Riverhead to Greenport and so we couldn't do it all. We visited the family operated Catapano Dairy Farm where a variety of cheeses, yogurts and goats milk skin care products are made daily with fresh pasteurized milk from their amazing herd of goats. Fred Lee of Sang Lee farms captivated his large audience with his talk on sustainable, local agriculture and stressed the importance of CSA (Community Supported Agriculture) membership. The farm grows an extensive variety of heirloom tomatoes, baby and Asian greens, herbs and flowers. At Fred's suggestions I picked up some heirlooms to prepare the inspired recipe below. A stop at Taste of North Fork and a tour of their kitchen where custom products are made with local ingredients provided us with tastings of jams and jellies, vinegars and mustards, and North Fork potato chips, my weakness.

Then off we went to TY LLWYD (strangely pronounced "tea clue id") Farm. We followed Welsh born Elizabeth Wines around the Wines family chicken and duck farm where only female chickens with a few roosters – one rooster for every fifteen chickens – waddle around in their pens. The sole purpose of the Rhode Island Reds is to lay eggs and eggs they lay – about 50 dozen each day. Dinner that Sunday night was poached eggs Provencal – how could I resist.

SCRAMBLED EGGS WITH FETA AND TOMATO

My Greek-born mother frequently prepared this tasty dish on Sunday mornings.

Serves 3-4

6 extra-large eggs, scrambled
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/3 cup feta cheese, crumbled
1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and diced
Dash or two paprika
Toast slices

1. Beat eggs well in a medium bowl with a fork or whisk until light and fluffy. Season with salt and pepper

2. Heat the butter in a non-stick 12 inch skillet over medium-low heat. Add the eggs and stir with a wooden spoon or heat-proof spatula until slightly set and moist curds begin to form. Quickly add the crumbled feta, sprinkle with paprika then add tomato and stir to mix.

3. Serve on warm plates with toast of your choice.

POACHED EGGS PROVENCAL

A simple tomato sauce is the base for softly poached eggs topped with a grating of nutty Swiss Gruyere
Serves 6

2 tablespoons white vinegar
6 extra-large eggs

For the sauce

1 1/2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 large clove garlic, finely chopped
6 plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced

Karen Catapano and Maureen Gould at Catapano Dairy Farm in Peconic

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Dash cayenne

2 tablespoons chiffonade of fresh basil

1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves

5-6 tablespoons freshly grated Swiss Gruyere cheese

1. To soft-poach eggs bring 3 quarts water and vinegar to a rapid boil in a large saucepan. Reduce to a brisk simmer and break one egg at a time on the side of the saucepan into the simmering water. With a spoon rotate the surface over the egg to help draw the whites around the yolk. Continue to cook remaining eggs about 3 minutes for a runny yolk, rolling them over half way through the cooking time. Remove the eggs with a slotted spoon to a bowl of iced water to stop the cooking. Drain on paper towels and trim off any hanging pieces of whites.

2. Prepare the sauce in a wide oven-proof skillet. Warm oil in the skillet and add garlic. Saute over medium heat about 30-40 seconds. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper, cayenne and herbs and stir to mix. Simmer for

5-6 minutes to retain the texture of the tomatoes. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

3. Arrange poached eggs in a single layer over tomato mixture. Season eggs lightly with salt, pepper and cayenne and sprinkle grated cheese over the top. Can be prepared up to an hour or so ahead to this point.

4. When ready to serve place in a preheated 350 degree oven. Bake 5-6 minutes until the cheese melts. Serve hot with brioche rolls.

Adapted from Silvia Lehrer's Cooking at Cooktique, Doubleday.

RED, YELLOW AND ORANGE HEIRLOOM TOMATO SALAD

Heirloom tomatoes team up with shavings of Parmesan for a colorful late summer salad. Just dress with good quality vinegar and oil and a scattering of basil chiffonade.

Serves 4-6

1 each large ripe red, yellow and orange heirloom tomatoes

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1 tablespoon balsamic or sherry wine vinegar

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

Shavings of Parmesan cheese from a solid chunk

1/2 cup chiffonade of fresh basil*

1. Rinse and dry tomatoes and slice about 1/2 inch thick. Alternate the colorful slices on a serving platter. Drizzle with olive oil in a thin stream to coat then sprinkle with vinegar. Season tomatoes with salt and pepper and scatter Parmesan shavings and basil over the top.

*Note: for the basil chiffonade stack several fresh basil leaves, roll up tightly like a cigar then slice cross-wise. Repeat as necessary for desired amount.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

BILLY SULLIVAN AT GUILD HALL

An odd phenomenon occurs when we designate "Billy Sullivan at Guild Hall." It's not merely the idea that Sullivan's works are in an exhibit at Guild Hall – rather, it's as if the artist himself is hanging out there.

Such is the nature of not only Sullivan's pervasive personality but also the show's personal nature. Thus, we sense that we're beginning to "know" the artist's cast of characters, whether they are friends, family or pets.

Since we're not privy to Sullivan's private and professional life, nor do we keep up with society gossip, we aren't sure who is who, but it doesn't matter. Our imagination runs wild as we are drawn to the people captured on canvas. Simply put, Sullivan has a special knack for evoking his subjects' colorful behavior, clothes, antics and often ambiguous life style. Additionally, and more importantly, we as viewers want to learn more about Sullivan's characters. And we can't help but compare such a reaction to Andy Warhol's depictions of his own associates.

There are other aspects that interest us – people's names and their relationship to each other. Consider the genderless designation of individuals like "Ricky," "Alessio," "Cookie" and "Sirpa." While it's usually clear in the paintings who is male or female, the names themselves could be androgynous. (The figure of Alessio London literally falls into this category.)

"Alessio London"

We can't quite pinpoint the relationship between Sullivan's figures either. Take, for example, "Louie and Ricky," where the two men seem lost in their own thoughts, each looking into the distance. Two women, "Cookie & Sharon," suggest the same demeanor. (An exception is "Klaus and Clarissa," who are looking directly at each other with their backs to the spectator.)

Sullivan's single figures appear immersed in their own worlds as well. Often, this immersion is outside the context of the image itself. Such examples include the dog, "Mimosa," who's watching something beyond the picture plane. "Alessio London" is also looking out the window of a car. With "Sirpa's Back," the female figure is still distanced from the setting, burying herself in the bed sheets.

Finally, Sullivan's penchant for objects represents another salient aspect: Sirpa's breakfast food; Klaus and Clarissa's bedspread / umbrella; Cookie & Sharon's car dashboard. Sullivan possesses a unique talent for making the inanimate seem animate. In fact, the word "animation" pretty much characterizes the artist's entire body of work.

This exhibit will be on view until Oct. 14 at East Hampton's Guild Hall.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CUCA ROMLEY

It's always a pleasure to visit Cuca Romley, this week's cover artist, at her charming, historic row house on Main Street in Sag Harbor. Considering the history that surrounds her, it's no wonder that Ms. Romley is attracted to capturing the past on canvas. The nostalgia, which the cover evokes, is a case in point, although it's based on a recent village parade.

The following conversation took place in Ms. Romley's office across the hall from her gallery's (The Winter Tree) exhibition space.

The entire upper floor, where she lives, resembles a gallery, in fact, the walls filled with Ms. Romley's own paintings, self-crafted furniture and jewelry.

Despite Ms. Romley's penchant for the past, she admits that she doesn't look back hoping to not repeat the past.

Q: You've had quite a summer at The Winter Tree, showing antique motorcycles, which is quite unusual, planning the first Sag Harbor Art Festival, organizing your next show with Barbara Hadden and Jean Holabird, and, when you have time, painting. Where do you get your ideas for all these activities?

A: I always have ideas. What I don't have is the time to do them all.

Q: Winter is coming. After a busy summer, is the winter difficult?

A: Here, you have to survive the winter. I paint in the winter, and last December I went to Brazil on vacation to be with my daughter who was there on vacation also.

Q: During the winter, do you ever think of going back to Spain where you were raised or Paris where you lived?

A: No. I do have some of my relatives still living in Spain, but I was the only family member to leave and start a new life in America. I don't look back.

Q: You must miss something about Europe.

A: Yes, I miss the food and the fact that distances are not a big thing. Here you have to travel for seven hours to get to Maine.

Q: What is it that attracted you to Sag Harbor after living in Europe and then New York? You've had The Winter Tree for five years now. Is it the architecture here that you like? Some houses date back to the 1600s, although that's not old compared to Europe.

A: I like the architectural style here, but I like nature most of all, especially in America. But we may be messing up the planet. And, of course, I love painting.

Q: How important is your painting?

A: If I didn't have work (painting) I would be lost. I'm used to not having my family around; my daughter lives in California. So painting is my life. I want to paint more seriously, but I had to limit myself to the space I had. Now I have a studio on the top floor so I can make larger paintings.

Q: I'm sure you will still have a respect for the past even if you do larger canvases.

A: Yes, I respect the past; I want to be a witness to what's left. I do my best.

Solar Energy – A Wise Investment

I'm sitting at Bobby Van's with Steve Rogin, the owner and CEO of New Energy, a solar power energy company based in Bridgehampton. Steve is a local East Ender and a businessman, and it was immediately clear to me that his passion for alternative energy is where he sees the future of energy, but also as a very practical means of energy today.

Solar Power has come very far and the demand for new ways of producing electricity because of the high financial cost that it bears on all of us has spurred business at New Energy. "Now it just makes sense to get solar power in your home. Especially if you are a summer resident and are not in your home that much during the fall and winter."

What surprised me about my interview with Steve was how it makes financial sense to invest in solar energy for your home. "In the long run, you'll save money. The hard part is convincing people that they really will. But once you show them just how much money they can save, it really becomes easy."

Although the investment for solar power can seem high on a home, with packages starting around $50,000, the payoff is great. You can begin to see a return on your investment within the first year and Steve's firm can calculate all of that information, from the first to tenth year of having solar paneling on your roof.

"There are also tremendous rebates that LIPA and the state offers for solar power."

Steve broke down a $50,000 system and after all of the rebates and paybacks from the state and LIPA, the total cost of the system goes from $50,000 to around $20,000. Of course, New Energy handles all of the paper work that is involved in making sure that a client gets those rebates.

Going green is not only a popular thing to do these days – it makes financial sense as well. Steve's background is in just that – having worked for Johnson & Johnson in the past and advising them on ways they could cut back on the amount of metal they were using on their band-aid boxes. You know those thin paper boxes they have now? You can thank Steve for that. Johnson & Johnson can also thank him for the millions of dollars they have saved over the years in packaging costs. "That's what people really need to realize about alternative energy. They need to see that they can really save a lot of money and help the earth at the same time. When I meet somebody that is interested in getting solar energy, I don't do a hard sale to get them to buy it. I simply show them what it can do for them and my product really sells itself."

Solar paneling on rooftops are ideal to be facing towards the south for maximum sun exposure and an expert from New Energy is happy to come down to your home to have a look at your roof and see what would be the best option for you to save the most money on your electric bill each month.

"It is pretty wild for a lot of our clients to get their electric bill and see a negative number next to it," Steve told me. "It almost doesn't seem possible to them, but it absolutely is possible."

Solar is rapidly becoming a very popular way to get extra electricity pumping through your home. And if you make the assumption that the cost of electricity is going to continue to go up, getting solar paneling on your home is a wise investment. Having it installed in the Hamptons makes even more sense for summer residents who do not use their homes during the colder months because the electricity that you build up from the solar panels gets tracked and stored. So when you are not using electricity, you can save it for later.

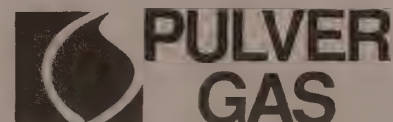

If you are interested in solar power, give Steve a call at New Energy in Bridgehampton. The number is (631) 537-7711. You'll be surprised by what it can do for you.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Fall Upon Us!

Summer has come and gone with alacrity! Now, in mid-September, Indian summer is here with its sunshine, slant of light and tolerable heat. It is time to turn attention away from summer to preparing gardens for winter and a glorious next spring.

One of the more neglected fall activities is watering. Once the summer heat has passed, many people forget plants still need water to survive and get strong for winter. Fall watering is especially critical because roots are unable to take up moisture once the ground freezes. Now is an important time to water gardens/lawns very well before frost/freezing occurs. Be sure to deep soak flowerbeds and lawns to compliment any rain that may occur. Light watering is ineffective and keeps roots near the surface, limiting plant survival over winter.

September is a good time to focus on lawns. Over-seeding lawns in September produces an added boost to dead spots and provides freshness. Both natural and sod lawns benefit from fall aeration. When the soil is moist, aerate the lawn with an automated coring machine.

Aeration holes are a good avenue for soaking in pesticides and fertilizers. Grubs feed near the surface in spring and fall and eat tender roots. Check for a grub infestation by tugging on sections of turf to see if it peels back easily. If the turf peels away like a carpet, it is likely you have a grub infestation. You can apply a grubicide or milky spore powder (this takes a season or longer to work). After applying, subsequent watering will help soak the preparation into aeration holes and eradicate the pests.

Lawn fertilizers can also be applied in September to help lawns over winter. While the temperatures are in the 60's during the day and 40's at night, leaf blades stop growing, but roots remain active. Fertilizers applied during this time feed the roots and help ensure winter hardiness of grasses. Use an organic fertilizer instead of one of the salt-based "winterizers" that are popular in the markets. The salt-based fertilizers actually compact soil and are detrimental to the environment. While they may seem to work for a season or so, they ultimately undermine the natural ecosystem of soil and harm lawns.

There are other important chores at this time of year. Most of them do not yield immediate results, but are of high importance for the longer-term health and beauty of gardens. With about seven weeks before the freeze, now is a good time to transplant or plant woody ornamentals. Just be sure to provide "mucho" water. Now is also the time to dig and store tender bulbs like dahlias, caladiums, cannas and tuberous begonias. Late September is a good time to prune roses and to mulch them heavily before the ground freezes.

You can also take cuttings of plants to root and over-winter indoors. Add spring color to the garden by planting bulbs such as tulips, daffodils, alliums, crocus, and others spring bulbs. Planting now provides adequate time for them to develop strong roots and to prepare for a wonderful spring display.

Mulch all perennials with four inches of coarse organic materials once a hard freeze takes place. The cold rarely harms perennials. Rather, the continuing freezing and thawing in winter can heave roots out of the soil and damage them.

Special winter protection may be required for some plants – especially the trunks of fruit trees, maples, and others with thin bark. Rodents and deer love to feed on bark in winter. Purchase white, spiral-type collars that reflect the sun's heat and avoid bark splits. As the season progresses, mulch and wrap fig trees and other marginal plants to help them survive.

September is also the best time to reflect on the season. Aside from the chores mentioned above, September provides time to appreciate and study the garden without the hectic schedules of spring and summer.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Sag Harbor is one of the busiest villages on the East End. It also connects the Hamptons to Shelter Island via North Haven. It streams into North Sea and East Hampton from their respective directions linking it to the rest of the Hamptons. The exchange of real estate in this area in the past few years has drawn much attention. Pricing in the village and the demand for space there has substantially and steadily risen and, as a result, interest in North Haven has spiked.

The Bullova Watchcase factory that sold in 2005 to Cape Advisors, a New Jersey based development company, is still in the planning stages for the luxury condominiums that they will be building on the site. The property is approximately a square block in the heart of the Sag Harbor Village and is four stories high. The aging and dilapidated building, an eyesore for many years, will soon add to the beauty and stature of the historical village. Aesthetically, the town will dramatically improve when the old building is renovated. The plans propose at least 70 condos of various sizes, include a perspective penthouse suite that will top the building. The rooftop pool will not only maximize space but ensure spectacular water views from the highest point in town. The rooftop, as well as the upper level, overlooks the entire harbor. To alleviate parking problems, an indoor garage has also been proposed. The project, still in the town approval phase, is expected to bring the town's already escalating popularity to an all time high. The building that was nearly condemned still brought $16 million and the renovation of the site will drive the value far past most all other commercial sites in the area. The units will be priced accordingly and are said to be the first of their typ here in the Hamptons, offering its discerning residents every amenity.

The exclusive hamlet of North Haven has remained one of the East End's best kept secrets for many years. Interest in the area's real estate has grown dramatically since the historic Maycroft Estate was placed on the market. At that time many feared the property would be diced into lots and McMansions but instead a private party purchased the mammoth but deteriorating estate with intentions of restoring it to its formal glory. After paying $20 million for the sprawling acreage and aging Victorian mansion in 2003, the owner then spent millions more renovating and restoring it. As if that was not enough, the grand Victorian manse would be shifted in order to obtain a more desirable water view. Davis Construction has been moving homes in this area for decades, and did just that. It was an incredible undertaking and was the largest residence ever moved in the area to date. The 15,000 sq. ft main house that dates back to 1885 weighed in at 375 tons and was turned to face the bay.

Also in North Haven a 55-acre estate that faces Shelter Island hit the market earlier this year. The waterfront land represents some of the last of its size and kind to be offered here in the Hamptons where land is getting scarcer all the time. The property includes two residences and an existing dock. Constructing deep water dockage here in this area of North Haven is no longer permitted. Only existing dockage may be reinforced or reconstructed, making properties such as these invaluable to most prospective buyers. The property is listed for $80 million with Prudential Douglas Elliman in Sag Harbor.

Also in North Haven, Mirage Development, a Nassau-based firm who has dabbled in the Hamptons, built a spec house on the Shelter Island Sound. The 1.4-acre waterfront property, with a deep water dock was purchased in 2001 for $3.3 million. The small existing ranch was torn down to make way for the 16,000 sq. ft. post modern with 8 bedrooms and 8.5 baths, nine fireplaces and an infinity edged pool overlooking the water. The home was placed on the market earlier this spring, but once completed, the father and son builders could not seem to part with it. Project Manager and entrepreneur, Andrew Lucas, said that the effort combined years of passed down knowledge and craftsmanship that went into creating a custom built family haven. The home is now valued in the $25 million range. The 252 water frontage is suitable for a sea plane or sizable yacht. Jimmy Buffet who resides in the adjacent Actors Colony can be seen setting down his seaplane on any given day.

You can reach Diane at eastendrealtest@yahoo.com.

HANG TEN

Dear Dan,
Dear Leif,

Enclosed you will find a photo of G.V.'s (Ventura) niece the day she took her first surfing lesson. Uncle Gary (G.V.) had promised her last summer (2006) that next summer would be the year he taught her how to surf.

Unfortunately, due to my brother's untimely death, that promise was not fulfilled.

For a little ten-year-old girl, losing her surfer uncle, who was so known and loved in the Hamptons, was heartbreaking for her to know that Uncle Gary would not be joining his buddies at their favorite surfing spots.

On July 7, local surfers, friends and family re-united at "Flies" – a favorite surf spot in Southampton for a surfers "Paddle Out" – in memory of her Uncle Gary. After seeing the movie "Surf's Up" and viewing a paddle-out, etc, she was visible moved.

"Mom, I want to learn how to surf like Uncle Gary," she said.

I made a call to Island Surf in Westhampton, who referred us to Ryan and Kevin who teach at "Island Surf School." When Ryan answered, I told him we were G.V.'s family. He was thrilled at the opportunity to offer Alexis a chance to try surfing. She loved it!

The following day, the town of Southampton called us to inform us of a two-slot opening for surf camp. We jumped on it.

The day Alexis and her best friend Ali Conti, (who's family also surfs) showed up and to our surprise, one of Gary's best friends who started the Southampton surfing camp, was one of the instructors. His name is Michael Scheimeyer. With a lump and tears in my eyes, I introduced Mike to G.V.'s niece. He grabbed her and said, "let's go surfing!"

As a proud mother and mourning sister, I was overwhelmed.

My daughter got her wish. Her uncle G.V.'s promise had been fulfilled. His best friend, fellow surfer, was teaching his niece, to follow his passion of surfing.

All I could think was, "the legend continues....."

Thank you for all your articles in your paper.

The article in your paper back in March with the photo of my daughter with her uncle Gary was beautiful. I thought you would be interested in this story, since it relates so much to the precious articles.

Thanks again.

MONEY CUTS

Dear Dan:

"John Edwards and His Wife Campaign Here" (T.J. Clemente – August 17) was worth the price of admission. The statement "In Elizabeth's eyes, her husband is worth a $400 haircut and she would work overtime to get the money to pay for it" speaks volumes. Expensive haircuts seem to be in vogue with many Democratic Presidential candidates. Senator John Edwards $400 haircut reminds me of fellow Democrat Senator Hillary Clinton's infamous $2,000 visits to her favorite Washington, D.C. hair salon. There are tens of millions of working and middle class Americans who are lucky to take home $400 per week or $2,000 per month after taxes. They would have spent similar amounts of monies to pay for the necessities of life such as food, clothing, rent and health care. Their ordinary haircuts and visits to the beauty salon are a fraction of the costs Edwards or Clinton would pay.

Both Senators Edwards and Clinton are politically correct liberal birds of a feather that flock together. They claim to be friends of ordinary working and middle class Americans, but while they talk the talk, they don't walk the walk. Edwards and Clinton offer expensive style, but no substance. Both spend like millionaires on personal pampering. They own multimillion-dollar homes in elite suburbs and live a lifestyle that average citizens can only dream about. Both have raised millions of dollars in campaign contributions from the usual crowd of lobbyists, trial lawyers, Hollywood celebrities and special interest Pay for Play crowds. All of these players are investing their campaign contributions looking for future White House access and favors such as favorable legislation, friendly tax code changes and regulations along with funding of pet programs all in their areas of interest at taxpayers expense.

In reality, both Clinton and Edwards are part of the Washington bipartisan inside the beltway crowd committed to preservation of the status quo. Those who desire real change, need to look elsewhere in 2008.

Sincerely,

Larry Penner

RESORT THIS

Dear Dan,

Re: "Trying Again..." Morpurgo property, Sag Harbor by Christian Mc McLean

I just read the above property about real estate in Sag Harbor. (Real estate anywhere here seems to be a preoccupation) I had to wonder what horse your paper is backing? Because it is clear your paper has chosen a side. The article dripped with bias, speculation, surmise and opinions.

Your reporter offered opinions on the law, real estate and family values. What happened to the 5Ws and journalism? Didn't Dan recently sell the paper to the Finkelstein group, which presently owns the National Law Journal and the NY Law Journal?

As I recall from a youthful brush with journalism, editorializing was not permitted in general reporting, unless the rules are different for a "resort paper."

Stick with the stories about the Giant Conga Eel and Dan's car getting stuck on the beach at high tide.

Police Blotter

Classic

At the Hamptons Classic inside the VIP tent, a theft of a $650 purse was stolen, along with a $400 digital camera. Police that made the arrest were quoted saying, "Your purse was only $650? How the heck did you get into this VIP tent?"

Not So Good

A woman from New York City was driving in Southampton and smashed into the back of another vehicle. When she got out of the car to talk to the owner, she appeared to be stumbling a bit. When police arrived, they gave her a sobriety test and found out that she had been drinking. After failing the sobriety test, police arrested her. She then went to jail, and figured out that drinking and driving gets you into all kinds of trouble.

Plants

A woman in East Hampton reported that native grass, worth about $75, was stolen from outside the front of her home. When people heard about this report, very few cared.

Log?

It was a nice day for a dinner at a home in East Hampton. A group of ten people got together for food and wine when out of no where, a giant log came flying over a fence and smashed the entire table in half and injured one of the diners. No arrests were made and the log thrower has not been caught. The diner's dinner was ruined, but they later had one hell of a beach fire.

Fight

A fight broke out between to men in Hampton Bays while they were both attempting to be the first in line at a grocery store. One the one man poured soda on the other mans head to let him know how he felt, and all hell broke loose. Apparently, the soaked soda dude is really more of a Pepsi guy than a Coke guy.

* * *

Shelter Island Thugs

Two youths on Shelter Island were reported to have been walking the streets cursing at drivers that were passing by. No arrests were made, but the two were identified. Those thugs on the hard streets of Shelter Island are so tough.

Gadgets

A man in Sag Harbor reported to police that his iPod and his Swiss Army knife were stolen out of his truck. The man is stressed, because he no longer can do anything, including opening cans and bottles of beer.

Westhampton Beach

A video game system was stolen from a Westhampton home in middle of the day. The teenagers who play the video game system, roughly eight hours a day, have become violently depressed. They have also developed something they call sun sickness, from having to spend time outside and enjoying the real world. However, doctors have determined that the boys are just getting a little tan. I don't mean to break this to the boys, but it is so obvious that your mom stole the video game system to get you to play outside more. Thank God there are still mothers out there like this.
